How to Shoot at Men
The Frog's Ear
We Need More People
Once, it Was Oxen

By Arthur Brisbane

MIAMI, FLA., Nov. 15—G. H. Howland of Miami, who knows human nature, is supervising a small gang of "short term" city prisoners, clearing brush and rubbish from a city lot. Driving an automobile when intoxicated is the most frequent offense among the prisoners, all young.

"Do they often run away?"

"No," says Mr. Howland, "not often, and I can usually tell. This young fellow that I am keeping near me," pointing to a pale faced boy about 20, swinging his heavy grubbing tool with savage energy, "was fixing to run away this morning. I could see it. I talked to him and told him he would only get picked up, and have to stay in a cell 60 days."

Mr. Howland, who carries a heavy automatic pistol, says, "No, I wouldn't shoot any young fellow only guilty of a misdemeanor. I might fire a shot over the water," pointing to the bay, "to scare him. I wouldn't hit him.

"But in county and state gangs of convicts of more serious offenses, running away means getting killed. First the guard sends a rifle bullet close to the running man's legs, so that he will hear the bullet. Then he puts a bullet in the ground close to his feet, with a second warning. If he doesn't stop then, he kills him.

"Yes, these boys would rather be here working in the sunshine and they are allowed $2.50 a day, which comes off their fine. That one with nothing on above the waist wanted a sun bath. He had had it, and what a sunburn."

Mr. Howland, who is a philosopher, says real estate is going to come back in a way that will surprise all. Everybody in Florida thinks and talks about real estate. Mr. Howland lost fine properties in the big boom, but what he lost he will recover.

"What's the use complaining?" says he, "when everybody loses with you? You have no right to complain."

New York's Academy of Science learns that a new living ear drum was grown in a frog made of skin from the back of another frog. Scientists are interested, because the skin from a strange frog, in the environment of an ear drum that had been destroyed, turned to ear drum tissue and functioned normally.

Anti-vivisectionists will weep for "the poor frog," although that creature never knew what happened, or suffered pain.

Suppose it had been possible to do the same for the great Beethoven, whose life was made miserable by deafness that prevented hearing his own music, and hampered his genius.

Hearing and happiness, for the giant Beethoven, would have been worth the lives of many frogs.

The Bible distinctly says that all creatures are not equal, which proves that all life is important, but, says St. Matthew, every sparrow that falls to the ground is counted. "Fear ye not, therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows."

If we are worth more than many sparrows, how many frogs must we be worth?

The tide of United States immigration has turned. At present more people are leaving the United States than coming into it, and the small quota of permissions allowing foreigners to come is not nearly filled. That is a bad sign for the United States.

This country was not built by aborigines, but by ambitious foreign men and women with courage to cross the ocean and come to an unknown land.

The first and second generation of immigrants, not the supercilious fifth or tenth generation, made this country. Recently we said to foreigners: "We don't want you except in small numbers." They now reply: "Thanks, we don't care to come."

This country would dwindle rapidly if that should continue, with our millions of acres uncultivated, millions of bushels of wheat, pigs, steers, chickens that we cannot eat; millions of second-hand automobiles unsold; possible millions of new cars, for which there is no market. What we need is PEOPLE, ten millions more of them now, and fifty million more later. Some, ignorant, think more population must mean lower wages. When United States population was under four millions, there was only one mechanic in the country, able to earn as much as a dollar a day, all year round. They did better

Cardinal and Al Smith Aid Coakley by Letter Pleas

Daniel H. Coakley of the Governor's council, his voice now trembling with deep emotion, now ringing with pride, in the Supreme Court today read letters from notable churchmen, lawyers and others, endorsing his plea for reinstatement to the bar.

Frequently, as he read praise of his devotion to his family, his voice broke, recalling his public statements that his only aim in life now, as he nears his 68th birthday, is to bequeath his kin an honorable record.

Cardinal O'Connell, Al Smith and others were numbered among the writers of the letters which he read to the crowd in the courtroom where several of his children and grandchildren also sat, listening intently.

Coakley today also reverted to the record of his appearance at a disbarment hearing in the Supreme Court 11 years ago where, he showed, he made the statement that his disbarment was brought about by gross perjury and fraud.

It was learned that Governor Ely, Collector of the Port Joseph A. Maynard who is chairman of the Democratic state committee, and Congressman John W. McCormack will write to the court, endorsing

MORGENTHAU IS ACTING SECRETARY

Dean Acheson Quits Post as Roosevelt Expresses Regrets

Washington, Nov. 15 (INS)—Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin will take an indefinite leave of absence from his cabinet post, and Henry Morgenthau, Jr., will be appointed acting secretary, the White House announced today.

The reasons prompting Woodin to retire from the Treasury, it was said, concern his health. He is suffering from a chronic throat infection and has been away from Washington for some weeks.

Dean Acheson of Maryland, who has been Under-secretary of the Treasury, is also retiring, it was announced, as he desires to return to private business.

WOODIN'S RESIGNATION

Secretary Woodin submitted his resignation to President Roosevelt on Oct. 31. He wanted to retire definitely from his post.

After three days' consideration of the matter, President Roosevelt wrote him and suggested that instead of resigning outright he take an indefinite leave of absence. To that, Woodin assented.

President Roosevelt emphasized that Woodin will return to his post as soon as his health permits.

The secretary will leave here the last of this week for Arizona for an extended stay. At his own request, the White House stated, Woodin will not receive his cabinet salary.

No successor has yet been chosen for Morgenthau as head of the farm credit administration.

ACHESON SAVES SITUATION

No official explanation of Under-Secretary Acheson's resignation was made. However, it appeared that he left to make room for Morgenthau.

Mr. Roosevelt wanted to make the latter chief of the Treasury in Woodin's absence. He could not appoint him Secretary without completely displacing Woodin. Similarly he could not name him to a post below that of Acheson. The impression given in official quarters was that Acheson learning of the situation, withdrew to make room for Morgenthau.

In connection with today's Treasury changes, observers were inclined to place some importance upon the White House visit last night of Bernard M. Baruch, friend of the President. It was recalled that there was extensive talk last

Auto Owners on Dole List

Five alleged Quincy welfare defrauders will be summoned into court next week, Inspector John Duffy, Jr., revealed today as the first move in a city-wide investigation into alleged dole chiseling.

Duffy charged that welfare recipients are owners of automobiles.

The revelations came about when a Quincy resident, notified by an insurance company of the cancellation of insurance on a truck, complained to the police he had never owned a machine and that his name was being used falsely.

Police check-up disclosed that a great number fo persons, in an effort to chisel from the city welfare department, were registering their autos inathe names of others.

The first batch of five such defrauders will be haled into court on larceny charges.

LINDYS HAILED IN LISBON

Lisbon, Nov. 15 (INS).—Taking advantage of a break in the fog which held them at the Spanish-Portuguese border for two days Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh flew here today from Caldelas de Tuy on the Minho river.

They circled the city and brought their Swift plane down on the surface of the Tagus river at 12:50 p. m., while ships in the harbor welcomed them with blasts from whistles and sirens.

The colonel told his welcomers that he expects to spend several days here before starting to the Azores. It was said yesterday that he intended to fly back to the United States by way of the Azores and Bermuda.

Boy Dying After Effort to Save Pup

Plaistow, N. H., Nov. 15 (AP)—Norman Rogers, 4½, answered the whimper of his dying puppy, trapped in the burning Rogers home today and, in his vain attempt to rescue the dog, was so badly burned that doctors said they feared he would die.

While John L. Rogers, the boy's father, sought frantically to find the lad in the flame-wrapped house, a fireman ran in and brought the lad out.

Everett Mother, Son Die In Strange Suicide Pact

Through all the years since he was born, 29 years ago, Floyd C. Oben and his mother, Mrs. Mabel Oben, had been pals.

What she had lavished upon the boy as he grew, and when he arrived at man's estate he went to work, and what he made through his endeavors he lavished upon her and their home.

Together they shared joys and shared sorrows—and of this latter the most bitter blow came two weeks ago. Floyd was arrested as a fugitive from justice in New Hampshire on a charge of selling unregistered stocks.

Today, still sharing, the bodies of the mother and son were found seated in the breakfast nook of their gas-filled kitchen in Summit ave., Everett. As they had lived together, they chose to die together on the eve of a hearing that was to have been given the son.

He was arrested at his home on Nov. 1, and was arraigned in Malden court last Thursday. When he furnished bail he gave among references the names of several prominent bankers and said also that he was engaged to a wealthy Brookline girl.

GAS FILLED HOUSE

At 7 a. m. today John Sullivan, caretaker of the apartment block, which has been unoccupied except by the Oben mother and son, smelled gas when he was on his way to stoke the heater.

Sullivan traced the odor to the Oben apartment but was unable to arouse the occupants. Then he called police and the door was forced open.

In the breakfast nook of the kitchen, seated side by side at the table, were the mother and her son, dead. Gas flowed from six burners in the gas range and all the cracks in the doors and windows had been stuffed with paper, cotton batting and strips of rags. There was no note, however.

DEAD SEVERAL HOURS

Pulmotors were rushed to the apartment by Everett police and firemen but efforts to revive the couple were futile. Dr. Maurice Kassell, who was called, said they had been dead several hours.

When Oben was in court arranging for his $2000 bail he appeared to have plenty of money, and the apartment in which he and his mother lived was lavishly furnished.

NICHOLS GAIN OF 69 SHOWN IN EARLY RECOUNT

Heavy Police Guard Over Votes; Former Mayor Sits In

3:30 Bulletin

Returns from Precinct 6, Ward 4, in the Back Bay, late today reduced the gain of former Mayor Malcolmn E. Nichols to but one vote in his contest to overcome the 2397 lead of Frederick W. Mansfield, mayor-elect. Nichols, at one time in the counting, had gained 69 votes.

Other Pictures, Pages 3 and 6

Strong gains for former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols were recorded today in his recount fight to unseat Frederick W. Mansfield, elected mayor of Boston by 2397 votes. In the first fw hours Nichols made a net gain of 69 votes.

Supervising his own interests, the former mayor joined high police officials, election officers, leaders of both camps, and a squad of patrolmen from the moment the recount opened in City Hall.

Workers for nine city council candidates who failed of election on first returns, were also grouped around the tables when the counting opened in a state of high excitement.

50 GAIN MEANS NAUGHT

Nichols' supporters received their first word of cheer when a block of 50 votes counted at a school in Quincy st., Dorchester, for District Attorney William J. Foley were found to belong rightfully to Nichols.

The joy was short-lived, however, when it was discovered that the 50 had already been corrected before final figures were given out to show the Mansfield plurality as 2397.

Completed recounts in the early precincts of Wards 1, 2, 4, 13, 15 and 17 gave Nichols the net gain of 69, however.

The count did not include, however, 22 ballots that were thrown out by decision of the full board of election commissioners over the protest of 18 of them from the Mansfield camp and four from Nichols.

The controversy evolved around the intersection of the voter's cross, which must be within the square, according to law. The 22

SIX SENTENCED TO JAIL FOR VOTE FRAUDS IN CHELSEA

MELLEY STARTS CONTEST ON ELECTION OF QUIGLEY

Man in Big Auto Paid One Defendant $25, Another Given Funds for Shoes, They Inform Court

Six men were sentenced to jail terms of six months each today in Chelsea district court for voting, or attempting to vote, illegally, in yesterday's turbulent election in that city, in which Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley defeated Representative William H. Melley by 639.

Four of them pleaded guilty and several told colorful stories of how they were hired to vote, but nobody in the courtroom asked them for whom they were to vote.

This phase of the matter was "irrelevant," according to one policeman, and as far as could be learned this afternoon, the police are not investigating any further.

MELLEY PLANS FIGHT

All six defendants appealed and were held in $5000 bail, double surety, for Superior Court trial.

Meanwhile, Rep. Melley, the defeated candidate, who refuses to concede the election of Quigley on the ground the election was accompanied by too much irregularity, was laying plans to contest it. The ballots are under police guard at City Hall.

Those sentenced to jail by Judge Samuel R. Cutler are James Ward, 37, a wandering lumberjack; Charles P. Fallon, 37, of Roxbury ter., Roxbury; Philip McCusker, 34, of Allston st., Boston; John Mahoney, 23, of Commons st., Boston; William F. McGlynn of Albany rd., Boston; and Philip Doherty of Harvard st., Charlestown.

Thomas A. Patch, 30, of Pine st., Chelsea, was found not guilty and it was explained that he was arrested because a policeman thought he said he was from Medford, whereas he had said he formerly lived on Medford st., Chelsea.

MUST PAY FIDDLER

Two others, Richard Myland, 49, of Florida st., Dorchester, and Helmer F. Holner, 34, of Worcester, were too ill to appear in court, according to word sent from Charles st. jail, and will appear on November 18. Their bail, like that of the others, was increased from $500 to $5000.

When Judge Cutler asked McGlynn what he had to say the defendant replied:

"Well, you know how it is, judge, when a fellow is broke and needs a pair of shoes, and has to take care of an old mother.

"They offered me a few dollars and told me I would not be arrested. I suppose if you dance, you got to pay the fiddler."

TELLS OF $25 FEE

Judge Cutler told him:

"That's right, you do. You're the goat. Voting is a public right and a public duty and it is a good thing the country in war time did not have to depend on men of your calibre whose estimate of their duty is despicable."

Fallon told the court he received $25 from a man in a big auto, whose name he did not know. Police Capt. McCarthy, as prosecutor,

U. S. Guards Star Witness Against Nazi Reprisals

Washington, Nov. 15 (INS)—Fear of reprisals today caused Chairman Samuel Dickstein (D.) of New York of the House immigrational committee to take extreme precautions to protect some of the most important witnesses summoned in the committee's investigation of Nazi propaganda.

Most of the investigation in the near future, Dickstein said, would be conducted in secret sessions of the committee.

Asserting that the Nazis are thoroughly organized on a virtual military basis in this country, the committee chairman is fearful some witnesses might suffer if their testimony is made public.

A police guard will be maintained throughout the inquiry.

The inquiry was to be opened temporarily today to hear Victor Ridder, New York publisher, and Clarence Hathaway, editor of the Communist Daily Worker in New York, which has made an investigation of Nazi propaganda.

Investigation by the visa section of the State Department and the Bureau of Immigration of charges that passports have been falsified for alien seamen and the immigration laws have been flouted, is expected.

The committee in secret session received evidence that Germans and other aliens have been brought into the country almost at will through these means.

The declaration of the "Mr. X" witnesses presented by Dickstein that Heinz Spanknoebel, alleged chief of Nazi propaganda in this country, was in New York a few days ago is expected to bring a new effort to cause his arrest on a federal indictment.

WIFE'S LAWYER IS DISBARRED

John J. Shay, Commonwealth ave. and Kilby st., attorney, today was disbarred by order of Judge David F. Dillon on complaint of a Quincy woman that he illegally retained $4500.

Shay's accuser was Mrs. Orpah G. Cronkhite, who was once his client in a divorce proceeding and in a civil case that won her a verdict of $25,000.

Shay, according to Mrs. Cronkhite, retained $10,000 of the verdict, of which $7000 was for legal fee and $3000 for the pay of detectives, he told her, she said.

He failed to pay $2500 to the detectives and later told her that he had invested the money instead, Mrs. Cronkhite charged. She said she gave him $2000 to place with it for the formation of a trust fund for her two minor sons. When she demanded an accounting and was refused, Mrs. Cronkhite complained to the Bar Association.

5 and 10 Heiress Gets Rule Over $25,000,000 at Party

New York, Nov. 15 (INS)—In manner befitting a princess and one of the wealthiest young women in the world, beautiful blonde Princess Alexis Mdivani, the former Barbara Hutton, today entered upon her majority and control of one-third of a fortune once estimated at more than $70,000,000.

In the palatial Fifth ave. home of her father, Franklin L. Hutton, Princess Mdivani last night celebrated her 21st birthday and accession to her inheritance with a party for a number of her young friends drawn from the upper and wealthier levels of New York society.

The entire eighth and nine floors of the Hutton town house were given over to the festivities. Guests were greeted by the princess, her father, her step-mother and Mrs. James P. Donahue, her aunt.

After cocktails before a huge fireplace, a caterer's assistant bore in a towering pink birthday cake on which 21 candles gleamed.

Supper was served at 22 small tables, the dessert being on silver plates. During the meal, guests were entertained by Gypsy czardas and mazurkas, played by a Hungarian band.

There was wine for those who wished, but Barbara responded to all toasts with sips from a glass of water. She does not touch wine, a member of the household said.

Princess Mdivani, who married the prince in Paris last June, derives her inheritance from her late grandfather, F. W. Woolworth, five and ten store magnate, and from her mother, the late Mrs. Edna Woolworth Hutton.

The Woolworh estate, at the death of the princess' grandmother, Mrs. Jennie C. Woolworth, was estimated at $59,046,702, but within a year was said to have reached $78,317,928.

FIGHT STARTED OVER 5-MAN RUM BOARD

State House Speakers Oppose Non-Civil Service Plan

Considerable opposition to increasing the present State Alcoholic Beverages Commission to five members and to appointing liquor inspectors outside civil service developed today at a hearing on the bill before the Senate ways and means committee.

Inspectors appointed outside of civil service, it was argued, would be subjected to every whim of the politicians and would feel bound to the source of their appointment.

In the other direction, it was argued that the state police appointments are not made under civil service and that state police constitute an efficient body.

Frank M. Doyle of the State Department, American Legion, an opposition leader, declared:

"Those who are calling for the abolition of civil service are the skulking chiselers who want a fat job. There are 200,000 veterans and they are entitled to go in on competitive examinations for these jobs."

Indicating Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., a member of the ways and means committee and a recent mayoralty candidate in Boston, the legionnaire asserted that Parkman received 30,000 votes for mayor because the people want economy in government. He would have received double that number, the speaker said, had the people known Parkman better.

PUTNAM FIGHTS FOR BILL

Senator Harry Putnam of Westfield, chairman of the legal affairs committee which introduced the bill into the Legislature, spoke in its support, citing that the work of the liquor commission would be prodigious.

The state, Putnam said, probably would have to be split into five territories, with one commissioner in charge of each territory.

Senator George G. Moise of Waltham countered with a suggestion that the liquor commission be held at three members and that five deputies be named to handle the territories. The $14,000 which otherwise would be paid to two extra commissioners could be used to pay the deputies, he said.

Senator Joseph Cotton, of Lexington, member of the legal affairs committee, favored a commission of three and civil service examinations for inspectors.

DERHAM FAVORS TAVERN

Absolute state control was favored by Rep. John Derham of Uxbridge, member of the legal affairs committee and one of the recess committee that studied liquor legislation.

Under state control, he said, many of the former evils in liquor dispensing would be eliminated. The difference between the tavern and the old saloon, he declared, is state control, and he favored the tavern plan.

Meanwhile today the legal affairs committee voted a bill which would allow 19 cities to hold elections either on Dec. 5 or Dec. 12, to decide the question of local option.

There loomed, however, a possibility that sale of hard liquor by the glass might be banned throughout the state.

READY TO JOIN DRYS

A number of legislators who favor licensing taverns, have stated frankly that if the tavern system is rejected they will join with the drys in voting against the section which would legalize the sale of drinks at hotels, restaurants and clubs.

In the meantime opposition to the tavern system continues to develop. Senator Newland H. Holmes, of Weymouth, member of the special committee that drafted the liquor legislation, was said to have lined up 15 members of the Senate who are definitely opposed. In addition there are prohibitionists in House and Senate, and a group who contend the national platforms of the two major parties declared against the return of the saloon. According to this latter group the tavern is a saloon.

The legal affairs committee, before which the bill is now pending, will probably take a vote today and may make a report to the House tomorrow.

The Tavern and Saloon Smell the Same

AFTER fourteen years of prohibition we have come to a decided crisis in the life of Massachusetts and of the other states in the United States.

We have repealed prohibition. We are about to set up, in Massachusetts first of all, a new system to regulate the traffic in intoxicating liquors.

After all the hypocrisy and all the graft and all the corruption of prohibition we ought now to be honest and sincere with ourselves.

We ought to profit from the mistakes of the past.

We ought to establish an honest, decent system of liquor control that will avoid all the evils of the past, that will promote sobriety and that will enable us to rear ourselves and our children in the atmosphere of true temperance.

ARE we doing this?

Evidently not.

Prohibition was made the law of the land, first, because of the public disgust with the evils of the old-time saloon and, secondly, because of the public disgust with the old-time liquor interests and with their brazen control of politics.

During the fourteen years of prohibition the promise was made that when prohibition was abolished the notorious saloon would never be returned to disgrace the public life of America.

No sooner is prohibition repealed than we see the endeavor to restore the old-time saloon.

IN Massachusetts they would call it a tavern.

What difference does the name make?

A tavern is a place to drink. So is a saloon.

A rose by any other name would smell as sweet, and an old-time saloon by any other name would smell to Heaven again.

The only difference between the old-time saloon and the proposed whiskey tavern is that the saloon is a place where you would stand up to get drunk and the tavern is a place where you would sit down to get drunk.

And you would probably get drunker and drunker because you would have a shorter distance to fall.

Let us be honest with ourselves; let us insist upon honesty and decency from the legislators on Beacon Hill who are supposed to represent the settled, sober judgment and sentiment of the people of Massachusetts.

If Massachusetts is to have taverns, keep the hard liquor out of them. Restrict the public drinking of hard liquor to properly licensed and regulated restaurants and hotels.

If we are going in for true temperance, let us go about it the right way.

Novices Win Bridge Tourney Trophy

New York, Nov. 15 (US)—A team of bridge "unknowns" has won the Vanderbilt cup after one of the hardest fought final rounds in the history of the classic matches.

The victors, Frank Rendon, Benjamin Feuer, Philip Abramson and Sydney Rusinow, triumphed by 1160 points over L. H. Watson, Mitchell Barnes, Richard Frey and Sam Fry, Jr.

The winning four included one lawyer, Feuer, and three operators of bridge clubs.

Firemen Fight Mud in Quincy

It was a very fortunate thing that there were no fires in Quincy early today because two of the city's firefighting units would not have been there.

Combination 1 and Engine 3 were responding to an alarm on Lenox st. when they ran into an expanse of mud which mired them to the hubs. The apparatus resisted all efforts at extrication.

A city truck was called but could accomplish little. Later a large tractor was sent to the assistance of the bewildered fire fighters.

SOVIET YIELDS TO ROOSEVELT ON PACT

Subjects to Be Given Full Study Before Decision on Accord

Washington, Nov. 15 (INS)—Soviet Russia has yielded to President Roosevelt's demand that an understanding be reached on all the outstanding questions between the two nations before diplomatic recognition is extended, International News Service learned today.

The discussions are now in the stage of negotiating an understanding on these questions, which include debts, damage claims, propaganda and protection of Americans in Russia.

The slow progress in the discussions is due to the fact that Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet foreign commissar, is obliged to communicate with Moscow on the various questions to be settled.

However, the Soviet has indicated a willingness to compromise and unless a hitch occurs it is hoped a final understanding will be reached some time next week.

The President and Litvinoff talked over the latest angles in their approach to American-Soviet relations today at the White House.

The President said afterward that negotiations were proceeding normally, but did not indicate a definite time for any announcement.

The visit of the commissar was not scheduled long in advance, it having been explained previously that the President was ready to receive him whenever various points were ready for discussion.

It was their first personal conversation since the two-hour conference in President Roosevelt's study Sunday night. In the meantime, Litvinoff has not conferred directly with State Department officials.

SEARCH WIDENS FOR GIRL VOTER

An international hunt for Miss Natalie Cross, 23, pretty Everett girl was in contemplation today as Dist.-Atty. Warren L. Bishop, of Middlesex County probed alleged Everett election frauds.

Bishop planned to ask Canadian authorities to question relatives of the girl there in the belief that she may be in hiding. He charges that she voted illegally six times in the recent election at the instigation of Earl W. Brander, 40, of Summer st., Saugus.

Brander is out on $500 bail from Malden court where he was arraigned on charges of aiding and abetting illegal voting.

Miss Cross' family indignantly charged that the girl is being made the object of a political plot. She was interested in the candidacy of former Mayor Roche, attended sevcontest, relatives say.

CREGG CALLS $7000 INSURANCE 'RACKET' SLAYING PARLEY

GRAND JURY MAY PROBE INTO HIT-RUN VICTIM'S DEATH

Suspicions of Police Focus on Two Holliston Men; Officials Likely to Order Body Exhumed

District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg called a conference of state detectives at Salem late today to discuss possible action in the suspected $7000 insurance fraud murder of John H. Hinckley, 52, Holliston victim of an apparent hit-andrun motor accident in Saugus.

"This is strong reason to suspect that Hinckley was murdered so his insurance could be collected," Cregg said.

Police suspicions have focused on two Holliston persons. The conference is expected to decide whether an arrest shall be made or the case presented to the Essex county grand jury; and whether the body shall be exhumed at Whitman in an effort to decide whether the victim was bludgeoned before he was run over.

GRAND JURY MAY ACT

State Detectives Sherlock and O'Neill, of Middlesex County, who conducted a three weeks investigation that turned up many suspicious circumstances but insufficient evidence to warrant an arrest, were summoned by the Essex County prosecutor.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Charles A. Green, Medical Examiner Nathaniel P. Breed and Police Chiefs Holbrook of Holliston and Stuart of Saugus will also be present.

It was indicated that responsibility for action would be left to the grand jury.

Many circumstances are considered by the police to be suspicious, but they lack proof—in fact they lack evidence of any kind except that of a circumstantial nature.

MANY STRANGE ANGLES

That the life of Hinckley, an impoverished, intemperate carpenter and handy-man, should have been insured by a Holliston man who, with his wife, are named as beneficiaries of policies, totaling $7000 in the event of accidental death, is, of course, the basis of the probe and the strangest angle of the case. But there are many other strange angles.

The man who insured Hinckley's life paid premiums totalling $492 on the policies for two years, police learned. He took out the insurance, he said, because Hinckley used to get lumber on credit for which he stood responsible.

POLICE KEPT SECRET

Yet the police learned that the beneficiary of the policies kept them secret from Hinckley's family after the death, and then when they learned of them through an insurance company investigator he offered first $500, then $1000, if the family would waive any rights they might have to the money. They refused and hired a lawyer.

The insurance has not been paid and will not be paid until the probe is ended.

Hinckley had been estranged for years from his family in Whitman and had lived most of 15 years with his employer, Jacob Shore, a Holliston truckman, doing odd jobs. Shore says he laid out approximately $7000 over a period of 15 years keeping Hinckley in food and clothing and other necessaries.

The body was held five days for identification and when it was not forthcoming Hinckley was buried in a potter's field grave.

Meanwhile, Hinckley's family at Whitman received two mysterious telephone calls, one from an unidentified man who expressed the belief Hinckley had been the victim of the auto accident at Saugus, another from a man who said he was prepared to give Hinckley work.

Police are frankly suspicious of these calls; they think they were made to cause Hinckley's identification by his family rather than by the man who held the insurance.

Contesting Candidate's Eyes -:- Focused on Every Ballot

Malcolm E. Nichols (arrowed) sat in on the recount of votes before the election commission today that holds the fate of his political life. Victor or, as the first count showed, vanquished—that's the question which the recount must show. Nichols' henchmen were elated as the early check gave their man a gain of more than 50 votes—about a vote a minute. But, and here's the rub, Mayor-elect Mansfield's total had not then been appreciably changed. In the group around the vote counters are City Councillor Francis E. Kelley, Ward 15, defeated; John F. McCarthy, representing Mansfield; W. S. McKinney, representing Nichols; Alfred Drew, assistant registrar of voters. (Boston American photo.)

'Shake,' Sez You' 'And How' Sez Liquor Lady

By DOROTHY DUCAS

New York, Nov. 15 (INS)—A year of planning wet dinners for dry Senators in Washington equipped Mrs. Nellie P. Neal, Atlanta, Ga., society woman, for her position as "don'ts" dispenser of the home-making division of the American Bartenders institute.

She admitted it today with a laugh, between lectures at the newly-formed society women's class in "mixology."

"They voted for prohibition but drank whatever was available," explained the southern gentlewoman, whose losses in the stock market had led her—Colonial Dame, D. A. R., and all—into the professional eating and drinking business.

"Why, if they had a liqueur, they were apt to drink it all through dinner. Or highballs. Or cocktails. And any kind of wine."

Mrs. Neal, the latest member of the faculty of the school to which waiters, speakeasy proprietors, tea room hostesses and salesmen are coming to learn about liquor, says women must learn what to serve, and when, before they can live harmoniously after repeal.

She learned that all champagne glasses must be hollow-stemmed, that sherry goes only with soup, and such lore, in Nassau.

"There will be some mighty funny mistakes next month," she predicted. "A hostess will have to drink herself to show her guests how. She will have to know how to mix Martinis, Manhattans, Bronx, Clover Clubs, Zazas, Alexanders, Sidecars, Stingers, Gin Fizzes, Old-Fashioned. She will have to serve the right wines. So it is only natural she should be devoting her time now to studying these things."

Eating will never be the heavily fine art it was before prohibition, Mrs. Neal said. Five courses are the limit of modern endurance, even at formal dinners. Tables should never be set with more than three forks at each place, and if you only have one wine—serve it with your meat course.

Port, when in doubt, Mrs. Neal advised. It goes best with roasts and red meats. She does not approve of champagne with roasts, preferring it with poultry, salad and dessert. Sauterne, Rhine wine and Moselle with fish or oysters—and claret, said she, instead of champagne with salads.

By the way, Rhine wine is only served in a green glass, supposedly the tinge of the waters of the Rhine River, while still red wines go in ruby glasses.

Lest it seem trivial, hear Mrs. Neal:

"Insist on doing things correctly. The speakeasy era is over—and will, sooner than you think, be forgotten."

Conants "At Home" Begin On Sunday

Continuing a custom inaugurated by President-emeritus A. Lawrence Lowell, the new Harvard president, Dr. James Bryant Conant, and Mrs. Conant, will be "at home" in the president's house, 17 Quincy st., Cambridge, from 4 to 6 p. m. each Sunday from now until spring recess.

On the first Sunday of each month, according to the announcement today, they will be at home to members of the faculty and their wives, and on the remaining Sundays to students.

POLICE BAFFLED AT ROCKPORT

Rockport, Nov. 15—The house-to-house search of this Cape Ann town drew toward, a close today, without a clue being unearthed by state police to the murderer of Mrs. Augusta Johnson, 55-year-old widow.

Although District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg reiterated that the investigation will not be closed until the slayer is caught, the end of the second week of the probe was as unproductive of evidence as the beginning.

Police have had several persons under suspicion in connection with the slaying of the widow, who was beaten to death and her body burned in an attempt to destroy evidence.

Thus far a horde of state troopers and detectives, assisted by local police, have been unable to establish a definite link between any of these persons and the crime.

U. S. HALTS GOLD BOOSTING

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—The administration today fixed the price of domestic newly mined gold at a point far below the dollar figure abroad.

The dollar, meanwhile, fell from $5.27½ to the pound at the London opening to $5.37½. This in turn carried the dollar value of gold at London from $34.03 to $34.68.

By contrast, the price of R. F. C. purchases of new mined gold was set at $33.56, unchanged from yesterday.

Only once before has the Washington figure been put below the world price. Then, the circumstances were similar to those of today, weakness in government bonds having cropped out the day before.

The drooping dollar was carrying government bond quotations downward with it. This trend, if continued, would make it extremely embarrassing for the Treasury when the time comes to borrow the more than $6,000,000,000 it must obtain in the next year to carry on the recovery program.

Boston Bootlegs Beat Rum Expert to Aging Process

Philadelphia chemists, bent on saving America from a shortage of "aged" liquor, have been anticipated scientifically by Massachusetts bootleggers, according to U. S. Industrial Alcohol administration officials here.

There's nothing new, the Boston experts said today, about artificial processes designed to give whiskey, in hours, the semblance of bottled in bond brands that have been aged and mellowed for years in wood.

"Good drinkable" whiskies, to say nothing of gin and rum and cordials, have been turned out—sometimes legitimately, sometimes illegitimately—in ever increasingly short order, the federal men declare.

HOW IT IS DONE

Bootleggers, they say, have employed competent laboratory technicians and have perfected such quick aging methods as that of treating whiskey with powdered oak char and also that of putting heat pipes in aging barrels of the usual sort.

"But the joker in the situation," said Chief Chemist Arthur L. Marawski of the U. S. Bureau of Industrial Alcohol, "is that it isn't to make it healthful, primarily, that bonded liquor is aged for years. It's to give it flavor and make it smooth.

"It's not much of a scientific trick, these days, to manufacture alcohol beverages almost overnight and have them healthful in the sense that the word is usually used.

"But counterfeiting the mellowness and the rich color and the flavor of whiskies truly aged in charred oak barrels—that's something different. Maybe they can do it in Philadelphia. This is an age of scientific progress. But I don't know how it could be done, and I'd have to be shown."

ADDRESS MIXUP LETS FIRE GAIN

While his wife, Stella, summoned the fire department, John J. Crowley, of 43 Fellsway East, Medford, roused his mother, who occupied the apartment above him, and escorted her to safety when fire broke out in their three-story dwelling house early today.

Mrs. Stella Crowley was awakened by the smell of smoke. She aroused her husband and her two young daughters, Phyllis, 6, and Margaret, 3.

Her husband rushed upstairs, brought down his mother and together all five moved out of the smoke-filled building, taking refuge in the homes of neighbors.

Fire apparatus responding to the call was considerably delayed by confusion over the address. The fire gained tremendous headway because of the 15-minute delay and caused $5000 damage.

Mrs. Annie Crowley, who occupied the top suite, owns the house. Her son lived in the middle apartment. The first floor was unoccupied.

Fire started in some wood and paper in an earthern container back of the kitchen stove in the middle apartment.

65 Flee 2 Blasts in Rain of Glass in Medford

Two explosions rocked the exclusive Brantwood Apartments in High st., Medford, today, called fire department aid from Arlington and drove 65 persons out in a shower of shattered glass. No one was injured, however.

Virtually all occupants of the 27 apartments fled to the street and the entire neighborhood was aroused by the first blast. The second occurred within a few minutes.

Firemen from Medford and Arlington found columns of black smoke issuing from the basement and immediately roped off the area in fear of a third blast.

The apartment of Mrs. John Buckley, directly over the basement heater, suffered most from broken dishes and bric-a-brac.

Steel fire doors were blown off their hinges when firemen arrived in the basement to find the smoke issuing from a shattered smoke pipe. The janitor said he had adjusted the heater only an hour before. Police and fire officials ordered an investigation.

WIFE COMPELS MATE TO SEE RIVAL SLAIN

She Forces Widow to Her Home in Dallas and Shoots Her

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 15 (INS)—Adopting the code duello, Mrs. L. W. Boone, 35, mother of an eight-year-old child, today passed judgment on an alleged rival for the affections of her husband and shot her to death in the family's apartment as the husband looked on.

This strange drama of the old, old triangle took place early today, and Mrs. Pearl Hall, 30, who Mrs. Boone charged had stolen the affections of her husband, went calmly to her death with words of endearment on her lips for Boone.

The shooting occurred in the Boone apartment. Mrs. Boone and a friend, Mrs. Reitzell Morrison, had lured Mrs. Hall there.

Boone, who had gone to bed, was awakened by his wife.

FACES HER WOOER

Turning to Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Boone said:

"Tell him what you have been telling me," apparently referring to statements Mrs. Hall had made during the ride.

"Hello, Dan," Mrs. Hall said to Boone, "She knows all."

Mrs. Boone said that as she went into the bedroom, she had picked up a revolver.

Mrs. Boone said Mrs. Hall kept her hand in a heavy fur coat.

"Mrs. Hall suddenly started toward me and before I knew what had happened, I had fired the pistol one time," said Mrs. Boone.

The woman slumped to the floor, dying. Boone disarmed his wife.

"Goodbye, daddy," Mrs. Hall murmured and died.

Boone, in a statement to police, described the shooting:

"I went to sleep and the next thing I knew was when I was awakened about 3:30 a. m. and saw Mrs. Hall near the bed at my side. My wife stood near the foot of the bed, close to the kitchen. Mrs. Hall said to me:

"'Dan, she has got us.'"

EXPECTED TROUBLE

"I said, 'What do you mean?'"

"She replied, 'she knows all about us.' I then asked her what she was doing there. She replied that she came over to finish it, or to end it, or to wind it up, I do not remember which.

"Beginning to awaken by that time, I turned back the cover, got one foot on the floor to grab Mrs. Hall, as I did not know how she had got in my house or what she came there for, but having heard the remarks she made, felt there was going to be trouble.

"Before I could reach her, I heard my wife say, 'go back and don't move another foot.' I did not know anyone had a gun."

At this point, Mrs. Boone fired once, the bullet striking Mrs. Hall in the left breast.

Blow Soup? You Rate Low

New York, Nov. 15 (INS)—Do you talk about operations, illness or death at the table? Butter a whole slice of bread before you eat it? Blow on your soup?

If you don't, your manners rate above the average for young America, according to Dr. Ruth Strang, assistant professor of education at Columbia University's Teachers' College.

Test of 4114 boys and girls, according to Dr. Strang, discloses that youth is sadly lacking in "fundamental principles of courtesy and social usuage."

The test covered table manners, taste in dress, group behavior and respect for property. Children of professional people, Dr. Strang found, scored highest.

ELY AND CURLEY BATTLE FOR $28,500,000

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—Gov. Joseph B. Ely and State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley of Massachusetts conferred today with Public Works Administrator Ickes in an attempt to speed action on contemplated public works projects totaling $21,000,000.

The Massachusetts officials hope specifically to obtain a favorable decision from the public works administration on their program against a requirement that banks must secure all funds obtained from the government and placed on deposit.

They said the Massachusetts banks had been reluctant to provide such deposit guarantee and that as a result the public works program was being impeded.

ELY, CURLEY AFFABLE

Meanwhile, Mayor James M. Curley, of Boston, and a group of city officials were pressing for early approval of Boston's public works projects totaling more than $8,000,000 and were prepared to request an additional $1,500,000 for extension of the South Boston Strandway under the newly proposed civil works program.

Ely and Curley, bitter political foes for years, were in an affable mood as they met in a hotel lobby today. The mayor was the first to greet the Governor on his arrival this morning. As the Governor strode into the lobby, Curley boomed:

"How are you, Joe? I'm glad to see you."

"I'm glad to see you, too," Ely answered.

The two chatted for several minutes and slapped each other on the arms as they parted.

BOTH ARE PRESENT

Both were here primarily to attend the conference of Governors and city officials with the civil works administration.

Representatives of various states will later in the day meet with President Roosevelt to hear him explain the new relief plan which he said would give 4,000,000 men 30 hours' work a week.

The first step in the program is to become operative today.

The object of this conference is to spend $400,000,000 of public works administration money between now and February on projects handled by civil works agencies in each city any county.

By February, the officials added, the long-term public works program for which allocations have been made under Secretary Ickes' guidance will get under way.

Projects for which federal money at the rate of $100,000,000 a month may be obtained upon approval by the local civic works agencies alone, include highways, streets, parks, public buildings, sanitation, pest eradication and health control.

The President's program calls for enough of this to start 2,000,000 men to work beginning tomorrow.

Even Beer May Go in Harvard Sq.

License costs and distaste over the idea of turning their establishments into student grog shops probably will result in most establishments which are now selling beer in Harvard sq., Cambridge, failing to handle beer or any alcoholic beverages when hard liquor sales become legal, it was indicated today.

Five merchants in the square declared outright they would not renew their beer licenses under the new legislation, declaring they are losing money on beer because the majority of customers want food only.

Others said they were undecided but did not relish criticism if they turned their places of business into liquor dispensaries for Harvard students.

than that in 1929 with 123 millions in the country.

The trouble is that we have more of everything than the people can consume, so evidently we need more people to help us out, as consumers.

Under Kansas law a farmer, sold out for debt, may always keep one yoke of oxen. When the law was written it was thought the farmer couldn't get another start in life if you took his oxen. An effort to change that law was recently voted down.

It might be changed advantageously by substituting "one automobile" for "one yoke of oxen." A woman's sewing machine and a man's automobile should be exempt from debt collection.

With an automobile you can go elsewhere and look for a job. Without it, you are helpless.

The duck shooting season opens on Thursday and the government's biological survey says please kill the plentiful kinds of ducks, pintail, millard, black ducks, and spare canvas backs and red-heads.

Duck hunters are also asked to retrieve crippled birds, which unfortunately is not always possible. You learn that "at least 7,500,000 birds are crippled and lost annually," and this is wrong, not merely because the wounded birds suffer pitifully, but chiefly because it means a decrease in the stock of breeding birds.

Tetrazini, magnificent Italian soprano, is quite old, and her husband, very young, asked an Italian court to give him control of her fortune, which was $5,000,000, to keep her from squandering it. The young husband says his musical wife "evokes spirits with dramatic gestures, falling in ridiculous contortions on soft carpets."

He also accuses his wife of giving away too much.

The court decided that, as Tetrazini earned the money she has the right to keep or spend it, and further spirits, however "evoked" may be less expensive and more satisfactory than a young husband for an old lady.

This country, along among civilized nations, could be independent of every other, having everything, from walrus herds in the north to citrus groves in the south. And we have all kinds of weather. On Monday the temperature varied from 5 below in Minnesota, to 110 above in Santa Ana, Cal.

Elsa Maxwell Boils Down New York '400' to 160

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER
Universal Service Society Editor

New York, Nov. 15—Elsa Maxwell, that celebrated chef of international society, got out her personal cook stove last evening and accomplished the almost impossible and very important feat of boiling down the late Mrs. Astor's stagnant "Four Hundred" to the dynamic "One Hundred and Sixty."

Being wise to the ways of modern society, Elsa seasoned her "One Hundred and Sixty" concoction with notables of the theater and musical worlds.

Thus adding just the piquante flavor Mrs. Astor's "Four Hundred" lacked—and needed.

When it became noised about in the smart world that "Miss Maxwell is to give a party," the social ones who comprise the new, exciting "one hundred and sixty" immediately prepared for a festive evening.

They knew they would be invited. For it is seldom Elsa adds to, or drops names from her invitation lists.

And certainly she never disappoints—when it comes to giving parties that go down in social annals as entertainments that are "different."

The party given last night by this always interetsing woman at the Waldorf-Astoria was planned along the same lines as her large private party of last season.

Being the undisputed ring-master of international society, Elsa manages her parties much after the manner a ring-master at a circus directs the performers in his three rings.

That zip and zest in Elsa's parties come from a judicious mixing of society and the Seven Lively arts is seen in the last of her guests last night which included:

Paul Whiteman, the Marquise de Polignac, Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbuilt, Lois Moran, the Grand Duke Dimitri, Clifton Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Marilyn Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Jock Whitney, William Gaxton, Lady Mendl, Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Aldrich, Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker and, of course, the guests of honor, Grace Moore, Cole Porter and George Gershwin.

Kind Lady Seeks Buttons to Sew

Here's a chance for you bachelors, especially bachelors in and near Brookline, to clean out your bureau drawers and corners and have the holes in those socks darned and those buttons sewed back on shirts and the like—and at the same time aid a very deserving widow.

This nice little old lady has lost everything and is living with a son whose family is none too well off, therefore she must find some means of her own for support.

She cannot do heavy work but she can mend, darn and patch and will do so on reasonable terms, and she can also go out evenings and care for children whose parents wish to spend the evening out at bridge or the theater.

MANY NOTABLES AID COAKLEY BY LETTERS

Coakley's character, instead of appearing in person.

Among the letters Coakley read was one from Herbert Parker, former attoney-general and now associated with Robert G. Dodge, president of the Boston Bar Association, in opposing Coakley's reinstatement.

Parker in this letter expressed admiration for Coakley's ability, but regretted that he could not sympathize with his attempt to get reinstated.

MANY LETTERS READ

Coakley laid special emphasis on a letter from former Dist. Atty. Thomas C. O'Brien, stating that a charge of perjury had been nol prossed because information obtained from the Old Colony Trust Co. bore out Coakley's own testimony in the Berman case, and disproved the testimony of handwriting experts.

Other letters were from former Gov. Eugene N. Foss; Chief Justice William R. Pattangall of the Maine Supreme Court; Coakley's colleagues on the Governor's Council, all Republicans; Bishop Thomas F. Lillis of Kansas City; Rev. Louis J. Gallagher, S. J., president of Boston College; Rev. John M. Fox, ex-president of Holy Cross; Rev. Joseph V. Tracy, his own pastor; Rev. Charles W. Lyons, S. J., former president of Boston College, and Federal Judge Edwin S. Thomas of Connecticut.

REFERS TO TRIALS

Prior to the reading of these letters, Coakley finished his attack on the "answer" filed by the Boston Bar Association to his plea for reinstatement, which the association opposes.

Coakley made several references to the Supreme Court trials of the late Joseph C. Pelletier, district attorney of Suffolk County, and former Dist. Atty. Nathan A. Tufts of Middlesex County, which immediately preceded his own disbarment and was closely related thereto.

He said, addressing Judge Fred T. Field, who is hearing the present proceedings alone:

"I have reached that part of the bar association's answer to my petition for reinstatement in which the association said I was a bad man and couldn't reform, or words to that effect.

"BACKED BY RECORD"

"I wish to call this court's attention to the fact the only charge made against me since the day of my disbarment in 1922 is that I made false statements in my circular letter to members of the bar.

"The Bar Association complains because I said I had always insisted my disbarment was brought about by gross perjury and fraud perpetrated on the court. I wish to show that whatever I said in my circular is backed up by records.

"The Bar Association complains also because I said that false testimony was made against me at the district attorney trials.

DISPUTES CLAIMS

"The bar association also complains that I said I was exonerated in three courts of any charges against me and vindicated before the great tribunal of the people.

"The bar association further states that some members of the bar who signed my petition did so in ignorance of the facts.

"I wish to dispute these claims.

"When I sent letters out to members of the bar, I did so from a general list and letters went to many lawyers not intimates of mine. I asked them if they cared to sign a call for my reinstatement.

"With this I sent this pamphlet entitled: 'What do you know about Coakley?' I wish to show that statements made by me in this pamphlet regarding perjury were made in open court before Justice Jenney in the disbarment proceedings in 1922.

TELLS OF JENNEY HEARING

"Here I have the record of my appearance before Justice Jenney in the Supreme Court in 1922 which shows I told him I did not feel I could have a fair hearing because, at the trial of Pelletier, he had used the term, 'guilty of conspiracy with Coakley.'

"I told Justice Jenney I did not think it humanly possible for a court not to be influenced by what had transpired at the Pelletier hearing, and the court agreed.

"I further said to Justice Jenney at the time that I had been a victim of perjury and fraud, but that I had no ill-feeling against him.

ROOSEVELT WAR ON CURRY WINS SMITH'S AID

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Correspondent.

Washington, Nov, 15 (INS)—A large branch, well freighted with olives, was extended in the direction of Alfred E. Smith today from the White House.

President Roosevelt has made two significant gestures toward a rapprochement with the man whom he labelled the "Happy Warrior" and trice placed in nomination for the presidency and the man who opposed his nomination in 1932.

The first and most significant of these gestures was the appointment of Smith's friend, James J. Hoey, as internal revenue collector in New York. The second was to invite the former governor to the White House. Al came and a pleasant time was had.

MOVE TO OUST CURRY

The olive branch gesture to Smith was made all the more pointed by the fact that John C. Curry, leader of Tammany Hall, was in Washington for several days just prior to Smith's arrival. Curry was NOT invited to the White House, and if the administration or any of its parts took any notice of the Tammany chieftain's presence in the capital, it is not of record.

Politicians generally interpreted the Rooseveltian gestures in Smith's direction as a bid for Al's support in ousting the Curry leadership of Tammany and a thorough housecleaning in the wigwam.

The Hoey appointment was the first New York patronage that has gone to anyone outside of the FRBC (for Roosevelt Before Chicago) group. Hoey was the Smith floor manager in 1928. And in 1932, at Chicago, Hoey voted for Smith to the end.

IS AL SMITH MAN

In the recent campaign, he bolted Curry and the organization and ran for borough president on the insurgent Democratic ticket. He was, incidentally, the only candidate of any of the three tickets who received Al Smith's public endorsement.

Whether Smith will grasp the opportunity to join with the Roosevelt forces in the Tammany housecleaning remains to be seen. Some believe he will; others are not so certain. It has been a habit with Smith of late to say that he is "out of politics." Yet it is doubtful if Smith can be entirely "out of politics." It has been in his blood for so many years.

Roosevelt and Al Smith Chat Over Teacups

Washington, Nov. 15—President Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith had a "nice pleasant visit" in their meeting at the White House and about their conversation swirled today speculation about an alliance for a new deal in New York Democracy.

It was just tea and cake at the executive mansion as the President received Smith and Raskob yesterday. But before the guests arrived, Mr. Roosevelt appointed James J. Hoey as Collector of Internal Revenue in New York.

So Washington political observers were inclined today to see in the Hoey appointment an olive branch of peace and the prospect of a Democratic reorganization in New York.

"We had a nice pleasant visit," said Smith as he walked from the White House.

While the White House meeting was on, John F. Curry, Tammany leader not invited to sit in, left for New York.

Brown Derby Out -:- Al Smith Says -:- With New Gesture

The Brown Derby is out—take it from no less an authority than Al Smith, who gave it fame untold. The former Presidential candidate has switched to a new headgear now.

In Washington the "B. D.'s" successor appeared—a black "iron" hat, no less. Al doffed it when he entered the White House portals yesterday for his chat with President Roosevelt.

This is what came near being the successor to the Brown Derby. In Chicago Al donned Indian headdress. There are those who say Tammany's downfall in New York made this bit of feathers slightly unpopular.

There were those who thought a topper would have been the proper garb for this formal call. But, after all, the event was purely social and a "chat over the teacups," according to both Al and "Frank." A topper would hardly have been the thing.

Of course Al can always wear this mortar board effect for his new gesture of pushing the headgear back and leveling a finger at the interviewer and crown his stern countenance.

New Snap to Beat Record 22 Today

Greater Boston shivered on the coldest day of the season today and, according to the weather man, it is likely to be colder tonight.

The mercury kept dropping throughout last night and did not reach its minimum of 22 until 7 a.m. This was one degree lower than the season's record.

An icy northwest wind was blowing and the temperatures reported on backdoor steps, especially in the suburbs, were much lower than the official weather bureau figures.

The weather man predicts a low mark of 16 to 22 tonight and continued cold tomorrow.

Ward said he was a lumberjack from Seattle and had been looking for work in New Hampshire, after which he came to Boston and stopped at the Hotel Royal on Court st.

"I got into something I didn't know anything about,' he said. "I never voted before in my life.

"I was approached at the Boston hotel and brought over to Chelsea in a cab. We went to what I figure was a speakeasy and I was given a card with the name of the man in whose place I was to vote."

Judge Cutler said it was amazing that his first visit to a voting booth should be on an attempt to vote illegally.

"While in the House of Correction you will have a chance to learn something about the election laws," he said.

SOVIET PARTY TRAPPED IN ICE

Moscow, Nov. 15 (INS)—Trapped between colossal icebergs and heading for destruction in the Behring Straits, a group of noted Soviet scientists, aboard the icebreaker Chelyuskin, wirelessed an appeal for aid today.

For almost a month, the wireless revealed, the vessel has been caught fast between towering walls of ice, drifting slowly in the general direction of the Behring Straits. All efforts by those aboard to free the ship from the vise of ice have failed.

The scientists, headed by Prof. Otto Y. Schmidt, were attempting to duplicate their historic feat of last year when they navigated the Northeast passage in a single season for the first time in history. The voyage took 100 days.

While the position of the Chelyuskin is regarded as precarious in the extreme, Soviet officials believe the explorers can be rescued and the vessel saved. Aid will be rushed to the vessel.

year of his being offered a post in the Cabinet.

The discussion between him and the President lasted more than two hours. There was no comment afterward by either.

Leaving a White House conference on liquor control, Dean Acheson declined to offer any comment on his resignation.

SILENT ON GOLD

He seemed surprised that the announcement was already public.

Asked if he approved or disapproved of the administration gold buying policy, he stood on previous declarations that he would say nothing.

He spent the morning at the White House working with the President and the liquor control committee.

The retirement of Woodin, even though temporary, marks the first break in the Roosevelt official family since it took office last March.

EXCHANGE OF LETTERS

The White House made public two letters exchanged between the President and Woodin.

The first, dated Oct. 31, in New York city, was addressed to Mr. Roosevelt and said:

"My Dear Governor:

"It is so cheering to hear your voice over the telephone that I always feel better after talking to you.

"Last August, after a severe illness, I took up with you the question as to whether, on account of my health, I should relinquish the position I now hold in your cabinet. You suggested that I try remaining away from my desk for a few weeks and, as far as possible, forget the treasury, in order to give my system a chance for a full recovery.

"Unfortunately, I am not exactly built that way, and it has been impossible for me, on account of the great responsibility I feel, to refrain from being almost as active in the affairs of the department when away as when I was actually at my desk.

"I have tried faithfully to carry out your suggestion, but it has been a failure, as evidenced by the relapse I have just suffered. Therefore, I feel that I must tender my resignation and seek complete rest and a change of climate. My physicians have told me that unless I do this they will not be responsible for the outcome.

"I cannot express the intense regret I feel in writing you this letter. I have been so happy in serving you, and if I only could continue I would be the most grateful of all people. You will know that every policy of yours has had and still has my devoted support, and I have never doubted that you are the one man that can lead this country out of its difficulties.

"Gratefully yours,

WILLIAM H. WOODIN."

ROOSEVELT'S REPLY

The President's reply, dated November 2, at the White House, was as follows:

"Dear Will:

"I do not need to tell you that I am deeply grieved at the thought of your not continuing, but, at the same time, as I have told you, I would not for anything in the world, injure your health by any insistence on my part that you carry on the impossible task of running the Treasury Department and simultaneously giving full obedience to the doctor's orders.

"The first consideration is your complete rejuvenation and this can only be accomplished by giving up all work for the next few months. If you will do this, it is not only my hope but also my sincere belief that you will be able once more to give to the government the fine, unselfish service which all of us in Washington have so greatly appreciated. We need you back again, and the country needs you back again.

ADVISES LONG REST

"For this reason, I am going to ask you to withhold your resignation; to take a complete leave of absence and to do all you can to get full health and strength without any responsibility or thought of work.

"I hope that you will do this for me because of my own personal affectionate regard for you and because of the very great services you have given to our country during a critical period of our history. While you are away I can appoint someone with governmental and financial experience to be acting secretary.

"Very sincerely yours,

"Franklin D. Roosevelt."

ATLANTIC OPENS BIG 'AD' DRIVE

Believing in the power of the printed word carried through the medium of newspapers, the greatest advertising campaign in its history has been launched by the Atlantic Refining Co., C. H. Moorehouse, sales manager, told a gathering of Atlantic dealers and their employes at a dinner-meeting last night at the Hotel Brunswick.

"Coupled with new merchandising methods, the story of Atlantic White Flash Plus, a new motor fuel, will be carried to millions of motorists by an unprecedented newspaper campaign," he said.

More than 250 men attended the meeting, representing Atlantic stations in metropolitan Boston, Salem, Beverly, Lawrence, Lowell, Haverhill, Quincy and Brockton.

"The new fuel gives many premium qualities," Moorehouse sounded the keynote of the new advertising campaign, "such as the same anti-knock formerly used only in premium priced gasolines. It is quick starting, has amazing power on the hardest hills and it is sold at no extra cost."

C. F. Favorite, district manager, presided. Other speakers included S. A. Rose, merchandising manager; John Kretsh, from the Philadelphia refinery of the company, and D. W. Gardner, account executive for N. W. Ayer & Son.

GRAFT CHARGES UP TO ASHLEY

New Bedford, Nov. 15—Armed with graft charges made by an investigator of the Seabury committee of New York, a committee today planned to wait on Mayor Charles F. Ashley to protest projected closing of the schools.

The committee was named at a protest meeting of 1500 persons, many of them teachers.

Charges that graft and inefficiency in municipal affairs are the only things that prevent appropriation of money to pay the school teachers, were made by speakers who attacked the administration, the New Bedford Taxpayers' Association, the New Bedford Gas and Edison Light Co., and the press.

It is planned to shut down the schools on Thursday for two weeks because of lack of funds to pay the teachers.

Henry J. Rosner of New York, who played an important part in the Seabury investigation of Mayor Walker, led the attack on Mayor Ashley and his policies.

NICHOLS GAINS ON EARLY VOTE RECOUNTS

thrown out were ruled as those with crosses that carried their intersections exactly on the line between two candidates.

APPEAL UNLIKELY

The only appeal from such a ruling is to the Supreme Court but probably will not be invoked by either side unless they might effect the final result.

The principal gain for Nichols was noted in Precinct 1 of the East Boston ward where Nichols lost a vote at the same time that Mansfield was losing 15, a net gain of 14 for the Nichols forces.

In Precinct 1 of Ward 4, the bailiwick of Charles H. Innes, Nichols gained five while Mansfield was losing eight, a net gain for Nichols of 13.

The others were scattered through the low numbered precincts of Wards 2, 4, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18 and 20. In Ward 16, Dorchester, Nichols picked up a net gain of 11 votes through a gain of 9 in his total and a loss of 2 in the Mansfield figures.

ERRORS IN ADDING

Another sizeable gain was recorded for Nichols in Precinct 4 of Ward 4 when he netted 9 through a gain of 5 while Mansfield lost 4.

None of the changes materially affected the status of other candidates, the changes being arrived at principally through errors in counting or errors in addition on the tally sheets.

The gain cut down the Mansfield plurality to 2328 votes.

When the count started at 9:17, Deputy Police Supt. James McDevitt took charge of the guarding police detail, which included two sergeants and 15 patrolmen.

Before the start of the count, Peter F. Tague, chairman of the commission, warned that any confusion caused by watchers for the candidates would mean expulsion of the offender from the office.

Two employes of the election department were assigned to the count at each of the 11 tables and each candidate who qualified for recount was allowed two watchers at each table.

Charles J. Innes, son of Charles H. Innes, Republican leader, was included in the corps of Nichols watchers. Others present included Herman Hormel, president of the Republican city committee, and former Rep. George P. Anderson.

The Mansfield interests were in charge of Atty. Francis J. Murray and David Shaw.

Because recounts were asked by nine candidates for city council, the re-check of ballots will also include a check on figures in those contests.

The wards assigned to the 11 tables for the beginning of the recount were 1 in East Boston, 2 in Charlestown, 3 in West End, 4 in Back Bay and South End, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17 in Dorchester, 18 in Hyde Park and 20 in Brighton.

Nichols had lost none of the air of confidence he displayed in the face of the election night returns that showed Mansfield a winner over him by 2397 votes.

Nichols said, he expected to "pick up" 3000 votes in Wards 3 and 8 alone, but declined to tell his reasons for such confidence.

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—The Public Works Administration today allotted $16,875,612 for 45 nonfederal projects in 20 States which officials said would provide 60,801 man-months of employment.

The eminent attorney—he has often been called one of New York's most talented criminal counsel—was emotionless when, shortly before 7 a. m. the Supreme Court jury which had heard testimony for two months, returned its verdict.

Sea Carves Cape 'Divorce' for Provincetown

Provincetown, Nov. 15—That "Ol Debbil Sea" threatens to cut off 13 miles of Cape Cod from Truro to this port and transform it into an island, according to U. S. coast and geodetic survey experts.

They declared the sea is eating steadily into the coast line at a point near the Pamet River Coast Guard station in Truro. Last spring a three-day storm cut away several feet of embankment and swamped the coast guard station. The government was forced to erect a new station several hundred yards back from the shore. It is only a few hundred feet from the ocean to the terminus of the Pamet river, a small stream that crosses the Cape and joins Cape Cod bay.

The surveyors have found some places on the lower Cape where the sea has cut in 200 to 300 feet. Provincetown harbor is said to be filling up with shifting sands, having caused many changes on the bottom.

A few hundred yards from the place where the sea threatens to cut through, are a number of summer homes, including those of Dr. Frederic A. Washburn, former superintendent of Massachusetts General Hospital, and Leo Mielziner, noted artist and fathr of Kenneth McKenna, Hilywood actor and director.

FITZPATRICK'S GIFT FROM 'J. D.'

Washington, Nov. 15 (AP)—William S. Fitzpatrick, former president of the Prairie Oil Co. and recipient of a mysterious $300,000 gift in 1929 from $12,000,000 profits in a Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corp. pool, was questioned today by Senate investigators about the payment.

Fitzpatrick, a gray-haired, bespectacled man, was called to the stand after the investigating committee had vainly questioned Harry F. Sinclair, millionaire oil operator, about the amount.

Sinclair today read a prepared statement denying any directors of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corp. knew, when they approved sale of stock to the pool, that they would share in its profits.

"The directors to whom I extended a sub-participation did not know that they were to receive any such sub-participation from me until some time after they voted as directors," Sinclair said.

CONFAB REVEALED

Sinclair also told of a conference Sunday at his apartment between all the principal parties to the payment of Fitzpatrick, which Ferdinand Pecora, the committee counsel, called a "Santa Claus gift."

At the time, Sinclair said, he suggested that Fitzpatrick tell the others the story he had previously told about the gift—that it was extended by Blair & Co., New York bankers, in connection with a transaction with "the Rockefellers."

Fitzpatrick said the Rockefeller family had an interest of about 22 or 23 per cent in the Prairie Oil Company and about 20 per cent in the Prairie Pipe Line Company.

FRIENDS OWN STOCK

Friends and relatives of the Rockefellers, he said, owned about 40 per cent of the oil company. Fitzpatrick added that about half of the Rockefeller holdings were sold to Blair & Co., early in 1928.

They had been held by Rockefeller trusts which were winding up their affairs, Fitzpatrick said, and Mr. Rockefeller felt he could not properly repurchase them.

Fitzpatrick said he was concerned about his position when change of ownership took place.

As a result, Fitzpatrick said, he conferred with the Rockefeller office and was told he would be given some of the profits from the sale of the stock.

Fitzpatrick said he understood he was to receive 10 per cent of Blair's profits from sale of the Rockefeller stock. He received $130,000 and $19,000 in two different payments, representing about 2½ per cent of the profits, he testified.

Ely, Ickes Smoke Pipe of Peace Over Works

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Gov. Joseph B. Ely and Secretary of the Interior Ickes sit across the conference table at Washington and endeavor to compose a program that will bring millions of government dollars to Massachusetts and work for thousands of idle men.

GOV. JOSEPH. B. ELY

SECRETARY ICKES

This is their first meeting—in person

They met only once before—then by telephone. An asbestos wire would have been appropriate.

"What manner of man is he!" exclaimed Ely.

"I never took such a tongue lashing in my life—from any man.

"But I gave it back to him.

"We hung up on each other."

It was one of those, er-r-r, unfortunate misconceptions. The diplomats have a name for it. Now, they have buried the hatchet.

Well they might. Massachusetts is one of the largest taxpaying States in the Union, yet it stands forty-seventh in the amount received from the national treasury for public works and economic recovery;

The thing was mixed from the start.

The Roosevelts appointed ex Governor Fuller as chairman of the National Board in Massachusetts and this was accepted as a slap at Ely.

Senator Walsh and "Young Jim" Roosevelt were having their internicine and ugly war on patronage.

Ickes was disturbed by the failure of public works applications to reach Washington, and he requested his personal assistant, Harry Slattery, to come here and find who or what had thrown grit into the wheels.

Slattery found it was all, er-r-r, an unfortunate misconception, between two strong-willed men, one in Washington, the other on Beacon Hill.

Then Mr. Ely came on the 'phone. He had not only one but two State Commissions. And then the fireworks! Mr. Ely never got a chance to explain that the State had loaned millions of its own money to the Bay State cities and towns and that the Legislature, not the Governor, had purposely created these commissions because it had a proprietary interest in any funds received by the municipalities from any sources.

Slattery knew they were well-intentioned men—Ickes and Ely. He found they were members of the same college fraternity. Things got so sweet between them that Ely promised to give a state dinner to Ickes when he comes to Boston.

The public records should state, in justice to Mr. Fuller, that he did his utmost to compose the, er-r-r, unfortunate misconception.

GOLD HOARDER FIGHT OPENS

A plea to remove the gold hoarding charge against Edward J. Spiegel, young Boston attorney, from the criminal court to a civil court where the constitutionality of the new law can be tested, was made in Federal Court today by former Dist. Atty. Robert T. Bushnell of Middlesex County.

Bushnell argued before Judge Hugh D. McLellan for an injunction which would prevent the government from going ahead with prosecution of Spiegel on the indictment which alleges he hoarded $2000 in gold.

U. S. Atty. Francis J. W. Ford, opposed the injunction.

Judge McLellan took the matter under consideration after asking both sides to present him with a list of cases cited.

Foxy . . . I call it, these WEDNESDAY SELECTIONS

EVERY WALDORF MANAGER is sending me in his chosen selection for his daily "special." Of course these choices are made according to his knowledge of the popularity of that menu in that particular Waldorf . . . and, do you know, there has not been a "sour" choice yet. I am watching the results pretty carefully . . . to see if I was not right when we hit upon this idea of Managers Month, and the plan to let each man run his store pretty much as he wanted to during November.

● Wise are these Managers! Each proposed menu that reaches my desk shows much thought . . . much care as to detail . . . and a knowledge born of long experience.

● So I suggest, when you go into your favorite Waldorf, watch for the sign reading Manager's Special for Today . . . it will be a good one . . . for each of these men is out to make a record!

HARRY MORRISON
Waldorf Manager at 335 Columbus Ave., Boston

● If you should happen to drop into the Waldorf at 335 Columbus Ave., Boston, and hear a tall, nice looking chap answering to the name of "Sharlie" . . . well, that's Harry Morrison, manager of that unit.

● "Sharlie" . . . I wonder where he got that name . . . is a great fellow and a fine manager He has been with us eight years, hustling every minute to improve his worth to Waldorf, forever trying to please and always on the look-out for new menus and new restaurant ideas. It is men like Harry Morrison that makes Waldorf what it is today.

● There is a husky, broad-shouldered chap at the 16 Scollay Square Waldorf who goes under the name of "King Richard." When he calls it a day, and leaves that busy restaurant he manages, I suppose he goes by the name of James . . . James Richard.

● In any event he is "King Richard" to the hundreds who know him so well in the Scollay Square district . . . and so long as he stays there, so he will remain.

● I've watched the "King" many a time . . . when the crowds were simply pouring through the doors . . . hungry and in a hurry for what they selected. That is the time when the qualifications of a real manager shows in a man and this man Richard sure has it.

Not Nocturnal

Mrs. Martha Sims, long-time Back Bay home owner, had an ornamental potted plant—a pink oxalis, to you botanists—and that plant was her pride and the envy of her neighbors.

It was with hesitation, therefore, that one of Mrs. Sims' oldest friends finally plucked up courage to ask for the loan of the plant for a wedding.

"My daughter," said the friend, "has set her heart on having that oxalis in bloom in the parlor when her marriage ceremony is performed."

Mrs. Sims was gracious. "Take the plant," she said, "and welcome. But I hope your daughter's wedding isn't scheduled for after sunset."

The friend was surprised and just a trifle hurt. "It happens," she said, "to be an evening wedding. But I'll bring your plant back the very next day."

"I'm in no hurry for the plant back," Mrs. Sims explained. "But I lent it once before for an evening party and the folks who took it were disappointed. A pink oxalis, like other flowers of the family, folds all its blooms up when the sunlight fades."

Conscientious

Let's say he was a South Boston policeman. Actually his beat was in another section of the city. It was a section, nevertheless, where, on Saturday night, there were lots of plainly visible passers-by who were far from being exactly sober.

The officer, obviously a regular guy at heart, ignored the procession of harmless homegoing inebriates. He ignored them, that is, until almost one a. m.

Then he excused himself politely from a conversation he had been holding near his call box. He took a hike down a nearby alley and returned with a pair of intoxicated victims, one supported on either arm.

The prisoners weren't bad drunks as drunks go. They were respectably dressed and amiable.

So the well-behaved citizen who had been talking to the policeman was curious.

"You've been letting souses stagger past you all night long and paid no attention," he said. "Why pick now, at this late hour, on two who are better than most of the rest?"

"I'll tell you," the officer grinned cheerfully, propping his charges against a building and ringing his box for the station patrol wagon. "It's a cold night, I'm a long way from division headquarters, my tour of duty is just ending, and I don't intend to walk in. With a couple of pinches, who'll really be better off locked up, I can ride to the station in the wagon in comfort and get credit for being conscientious on the job."

Cat Medal

They don't, unfortunately, give hero medals to cats. But out at the Angell Animal hospital there's one sick tabby who ought to get one.

Her owners call her the Duchess, but her regal Maltese bearing was ruined, temporarily at least, under the wheels of a speeding truck.

When kitty was picked up, by the youngster whose special pet she is, her whole nine lives were almost gone. She was unconscious, she had apparent internal injuries, and her jaw was splintered into bloody wreckage.

Waiting for a taxi to take her to the hospital, the Duchess was placed, limp and bedraggled, in a basket. When the auto came, however, the seemingly dying animal had disappeared. Search revealed her huddled under a couch.

"Must be a final convulsion," kitty's owners guessed. Then they looked closer—and changed their minds.

The Duchess, in her battered paws, held a struggling mouse. She couldn't eat it or even bite it with her jaw all smashed. But she dragged it forth, cuffed it into quiescence, and handed it over to her six months old kitten. Then and not until then, did she lay herself down in her cushioned basket and submit to being rushed to Dr Dailey's operating table.

Peekings

Sister Jessie Costello has a pet aversion, pillows. Throws them on the floor when she goes to sleep . . . Paul Winters, Arlington and Back Bay sculptor, enjoys practicing his art upon his own physiognomy. When he arrives late at Al Cook's Huntington ave. rendezvous, he frequently has his nose expanded with modelling clay to caricature proportions and has ears similarly disguised into cauliflower shape or enormous size . . . Wartime field artillery outfits contributed heavily, it seems, to journalistic and fiction writing professions. Leonard Nason, novelist and short story writer, saw overseas service with the 76th Field Artillery . . . Frederick Hazlitt Upson, author of "Henry and Me in Artillery" and much short humorous fiction concerning tractor salesmanship, was an enlisted man in the 13th Field Artillery . . . Former World Heavyweight Boxing Champion Jack Sharkey likes to play pool with youngsters of Newspaper row. And will argue—just for the fun of the thing—about every nickel he gets taken for by the paper boys . . . C. E. Goodspeed, Jr., of the bookshop Goodspeeds whiles away cold weather by engaging customers in chats concerning his summer garden . . . Frederick R. Sullivan, school committeeman-elect, was once instructor of boxing at Harvard University . . . Henry I. Harriman, Chamber of Commerce executive, trusts neither belt nor suspenders, so he always wears both.

PLAN FOR RUM CONTROL UP TO ROOSEVELT

Washington, Nov. 15—A plan for federal control of liquor after repeal on December 5 was taken to President Roosevelt today by his special cabinet commitee, joined by congressional representatives.

The majority opinion of the administration experts favored placing the distilling industry under the supervision of the farm administration, but a decision on this was left to the President.

WANT PLAN SETTLED

The distillers had given to these experts a code for control of their wares with the pledge of protection of dry statees.

Before going South this week, Mr. Roosevelt is said to be anxious to have a fairly definite understanding on means of protecting dry states, a point promised by the repeal amendmeent.

So he called in members of the congressional judiciary committees who are in the city as well as members of the revenuee raising committees of Capitol Hill to look over the problem.

Secretary Roper was prepared with an opinion declaring the government has full power to take over the distilling industry under both the agricultural adjustment and national recovery acts.

TAXES COME LATER

Taxes will come later. The President will look over budget requirements for next year before determining finally on these levies. The predominant expressed desire among his advisers is to keep the rates down sufficiently low to make bootlegging unprofitable.

Some of the experts say they favor creation of a government organization to take over control of distilling, with the new agency supervising distribution of beverages and collecting taxes to be distributed later between the federal government and states.

GEORGE HOLLAND'S SURVEY of Happenings on Boston's Rialto

Lew Leslie Busy Re-Routining "Blackbirds"; Fannie Brice's "Follies" Role Augumented

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Being a fellow who would neither kick a baby in the face nor trample on a flower bed, the above-signed wishes to assure you that, conscientiously, he attended a local theatrical premiere last night and feelingly will turn to other subjects to discuss . . . It was semi-professional at best and at any rate has no place in these columns.

So here is some chatter. Sam H. Harris has gone to the Coast to talk about a musical show with Marx Brothers. But the Marx Brothers want $14,000 a week, more than the combined salaries of Helen Hayes, Philip Merivale, Helen Menken and all the other splendid actors of "Mary of Scotland," and the chances are that Mr. Harris will not produce a musical play for the Marx Brothers.

Philip Merivale

At that, Mr. Harris is paying all-time highs for other actors in his employ. William Gaxton, for instance, in "Let 'Em Eat Cake," is drawing $3500 a week; Victor Moore is getting $2000 weekly, and Lois Moran had her last season's stipend tilted so that she is now making $1250 weekly.

(Note: These figures, incredible though they may sound, are accurate and exclusive and not culled from Variety or other sources of such reports.)

Helen Hayes imposed on her management and Boston reporters a prescription that she would not be interviewed while in town, and in spite of a few remonstrances, I believe Miss Hayes is entirely within her rights and smart about it. The girl is playing the most taxing role in years and she deserves some sleep and leisure.

A Nice Gesture

A downtown spot called in other journals the "Steel Door," a place which features Ted (Hotfoot) Salante among its entertainers, did rather a nice thing Saturday night when the management cut the price of refreshments in half, or to 25 cents a drink, for each customer wearing the grey of the student corps at West Point . . . Not far away at the Club Touraine, young Leon Janney is doing a very good job as master of ceremonies.

Lew Leslie has been working a daily stint of approximately 15 hours in re-routining his "Blackbirds," and with a name topping the cast, the show should be a success in New York, experts agree . . . Charles Levy, youthful master of the Broadway Ticket Agency in New York, saw "Blackbirds" last night and negotiated the purchase of an allotment of seats . . . He saw the "Follies" Monday, but passed up "Mary of Scotland" because that show will be sold out to subscribers for its first five weeks in New York.

Rialto Gossip

Fannie Brice's sensational material in the "Follies" has been augmented by a rowdy parody on "Sailor, Beware," which is getting more laughs than you'd think possible . . . Mrs. Blanche Connolly, Bobby's wife, is in town . . . So is Lee Shubert. That producer has another new one headed this way in "The First Apple," a play by Lynn Starling, featuring Conrad Nagel and Irene Purcell. This piece has had two other titles, having played in New Haven as "We Meet Again" . . . Richard Maney of New York, biographer for Courtney Burr, on a Boston appearance yesterday implanted the notion that "All Good Americans," Mr. Burr's forthcoming play opening Monday at the Plymouth, is so fitting a vehicle for Hope Williams that the entire executive staff will be able to attend the Yale-Harvard game—the play set without further necessary aid when that Saturday comes along . . . All he needs to make his visit auspicious is indisputable proof that he has reserved 12 seats on the 50-yard line.

Extra Show at the Met

Because of the extra business due to the Fred Waring and band appeal, the Metropolitan today adds another showing, making five complete programs for today, to be repeated tomorrow.

Waring and his Pennsylvanians have always been a big "draw" in Boston, which accounts for crowds at the Met currently. The feature picture is Ruth Chatterton in "Female."

Great the Lure of Magic Mae

Mae West, whose popularity with film fans is so great that her picture, "I'm No Angel," will be held at the Fenway and Paramount for a second week. She is breaking records at both houses.

Vera de Villiers in Recital

By MOSES SMITH

The program of Vera de Villiers, British contralto, who made her Boston debut at Jordan Hall last night, was so short, but well-chosen, and her singing was so engrossing, that a good-sized audience willingly settled back at the end to hear a program of "encores."

This is unusual at a debut recital, ordinarily a cut-and-dried affair. But Miss de Villiers is neither a newcomer to the concert-stage nor is her art cut-and-dried. Her sense of style, intuitive and cultivated, was at once apparent in the old Italian songs that opened her program, and became more marked as she proceeded to similarly old French and English numbers. (I may say in passing that if the anonymous "Viens Aurore" was old, its arrangement certainly was not.)

A group of Brahms lieder, another of folk-songs by the same master, and four songs by Rachmaninoff made the rest of an unorthodox but well-planned list. Throughout this varied fare Miss de Villiers was a singer of opulent resource. Her voice is of excellent quality, of wide range; it is employed by its owner with great command of dynamic inflection, as well as of expressive quality generally; and, for the most part, the singer is mistress of the art of spinning out tone unhaltingly, and without "breaks" in quality.

Comedy Cue at Howard

There is plenty of sparkling comedy at the Old Howard where "Streets of Paris" is the burlesque feature. Conspicuous among the players is "Jerry" McCauley.

As the leading comedian, Mike Sacks supplies the humor. Billy Fields; Cheri, dancing beauty; Frances Muzzio, June St. Clair, Alice Kennedy, George Kinnear, a Waltham boy; the three Dayton Boys, Charles Dane, Nazzaaro Hallo; Henrica, Bobby and Victor are stars.

Gary Cooper Gets 4-Month Paramount Release to Make Film for Sam Goldywn

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1933, Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Nov. 15—Gary Cooper took off for New York last night with a four months' Paramount release in his pocket. Sandra Shaw follows by train Thursday night, all of which hasn't a thing to do with this story.

The interesting feature of this yarn is that Cooper's release from Paramount gives him the the chance to return to Samuel Goldwyn and make a picture. Sam gave the long, lanky cowboy from Montana, his first screen role in "The Winning of Barbara Worth" and ever since that time Gary has longed to return to the Goldwyn banner. He will play opposite Anna Sten in "Barbary Coast," returning here after three weeks in New York for the Goldwyn picture.

Louella O. Parsons

Cooper comes back to Paramount March 13 for his last picture and then—and see if I am a good prophet—it's my personal opinion that he will take Ronald Colman's place with Goldwyn.

Role for Lenore Ulric

When Lenore Ulric gets here next week, she will be told of a story that Vicki Baum, author of "Grand Hotel," is writing for her. Radio is particularly eager to have Ulric live down the bad pictures she made when she was here a few years ago. Maybe Lenore should get a few pointers on how to play "I Loved an Actress" from Eugenie Leontovich (Mrs. Ratoff). Gregory says that "I Loved an Actress" is the story of his life and, since all the world knows how crazy he is about Eugenie, she must be that actress. It's the first Ulric picture.

Synthetically at least Sidney Fox once more belongs to Universal. The first film company to give Miss Fox her opportunity on the screen naturally feels a proprietary interest, so they purchased "Midnight," a movie made in New York. She is scheduled to return to New York in December or January to play in "Dearly Beloved," a play which her husband, Charles Beehan, and Crosby Gates have written. The husband in his new contract with Columbia writes, produces and directs.

Fashions still unborn are to be worn by Norma Shearer in "Rip Tide." Every day Miss Shearer is in consultation with Adrian who plans to make her costumes so chic, and so ultra that they will herald the fashions of the coming year. Norma's greatest screen successess have been in pictures where she wore extreme styles and made every other woman envious. Notwithstanding that Charlie MacArthur, the author of "Rip Tide" took the big sneak neglecting to mention he had a date with Helen Hayes in Pittsburgh, the picture goes into production within ten days. Zoe Akins is finishing MacArthur's job.

* * *

Phil Goldstone is sitting tight on the title "Husband Hunters of 1934" on account of he thinks it's got that certain something that titles should have. Lou Sarecky has been engaged to write a musical to fit the title. Alison Skipworth (Skippy to her friends) has been borrowed by Jesse L. Lasky to play the society racketeer in "Coming Out Party" and will Skippy do a good job? The tabloid description handed me of Ellalee Ruby sounds as if the lady might be a jack of all trades; she is described as a New York stage actress, a model, and a newspaper woman, and now she is to become a motion picture actress. She has signed with Universal for "The Great Ziegfeld." Wonderful to be versatile.

Snapshots of Hollywood

KATHERINE CARVER MENJOU depressed over Saturday's football game; ROWLAND BROWN, her escort, looking none too happy over the score. EDDIE MANNIX sneaking in a few cheers for Stanford while DARRYL ZANUCK looked glum at U. S. C.'s defeat. KAY JOHNSTONE and FREDRIC MARCH all but calling each other names; KAY'S allegiance was with U. S. C. while FREDDIE cast his vote for Stanford. Many battles over the Trojans' downfall and a few private wars. RITA KAUFMAN hostess at one of the largest parties of the season given in honor of WINFIELD SHEEHAN. TOMMY MEIGHAN back here to make a movie. LEON ERROL with a new line of jokes. Good-looking RUSSELL PATTERSON, famous illustrator, his handsome wife, VIVIENNE SEGAL singing to Fannie's (colored pianist) music. LEW BROWN leaving very early. LILA LEE, escorted by EDDIE SUTHERLAND, and many, many strangers at the party which lasted until milkman time. MARTIN FREED here from New York to write an orchestration of Jolson's picture. HAROLD LLOYD, SAMUEL GOLDWYN, and COUNTESS DI FRASSO in an exciting backgammon contest; first honors to Sam.

Dressler Film Featured at the State

By HARRIS MORGAN

The world premiere of Marie Dressler's latest picture, "Christopher Bean," is announced for Thursday at Loew's State. This picture is based on the stage play, and the story affords a role with ample opportunity for Marie the Magnificent to achieve comedy and pathos as well.

* * *

In the picture "Queen Marie of the Movies" is co-starred with Lionel Barrymore. Her role is that of a faithful servant to an old country doctor. The story is based on the Sidney Howard drama, "The Late Christopher Bean," which made Broadway history and recently had a successful run in Boston.

Marie Dressler

In "Christopher Bean," Miss Dressler and Lionel Barrymore are supported by Jean Hersholt, Helen Mack, Beulah Bondi, Russell Hardie and H. B. Warner.

"Whirlpool" will be Jack Holt's next vehicle for Columbia, and the first feature to be made by the star on the company's 1933-34 program.

MISS MARJORIE GRANT'S DEBUT TONIGHT AT ALGONQUIN CLUB

'beacon hill'

By Betty Alden

WHAT'S ADO ABOUT TOWN . . . The Lois Davidson concert of Songs of Fascination brought together several hundred socialites . . . why? Because they were sponsored by Mrs. William Dana Orcutt, who has organized these Monday mornings of diversion . . .

Mrs. Orcutt wore a sheaf of orchids on her modish brown frock . . . Mrs. Gelston King was very girlish in black beret with upstanding black feather . . .

MRS. FRANKLIN HOBBS

Betty Barr, who served in the usher corps, wore a smart black dress with vest of red and red touch in her hat . . .

Mrs. Matthew John Whittall in her black Astrachans was very chic indeed . . . she always is, you know!

Mrs. Franklin Hobbs was hobnobbing about with this one and that . . . . she says she has a great secret to impart soon . . . well, the sooner the better, dear Mrs. Hobbs—we may find it out for ourselves.

In the inevitable beret, Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller enjoyed the sweet voice and gorgeous costumes of the artist . . . it was parlor entertainment of a high order.

Miss Davidson is extremely pretty and suits the costumes of the various countries which she sang about . . . the Chinese Celestial weaver was especially magnificent and impressive.

Why is it that only OLDER people go places these days . . . we seldom if ever see an audience of young folks, morning, noon or night . . . ? Young girls would have gotten an inspiration from Miss Davidson . . . a small voice beautifully trained, and an accomplished linguist. Why do not our girls try to increase their small talents with penetration and understanding . . . ?

A Magnificent Voice for Opera

WE WERE AMAZED AT THE QUALITY OF Mrs. Edward Hamlin, Jr.'s voice when she sang the other evening . . . so rich and warm and caressing. It so suited her dark beauty . . . Madame Clement must be proud of her pupil, although we did not note her in the throng seated around the tables.

Another artist whom we had the pleasure of meeting was Mrs. Marie Murray, contralto extraordinary . . . you hear her every week on the Jenney program. We hear she will take the title role in an opera this winter . . . a magnificent voice for opera.

Among these older groups of whom we see about so much, we hear mention of the girls who smoke throughout their entire presentation party . . . one pretty debutane, it is stated, smoked all the time she was receiving at the dignified Chilton Club and had to place her cigarette in her left hand each time she shook the hand of a friend . . . tttttt, where were you, Parents' League? who spend much time arguing whether or not the newspapers should receive the deb list which they can always get and neglect far more important matters. The problems of entertaining which is good for hours of discussion is not nearly so important we think as the problem of dressing a young maiden in youthful white, dainty and sweet as a debutante should be . . . instead of the tight-fitting, black and colored velvets, festooned with artificial ear-rings which we see so much of . . . We would like to see the Parents' League really function one season to some good end.

Bridal Couple Being Feted

PHILIP VAN RENSAELLER ELY (no relation we believe to the First Gentleman of the Commonwealth), who has lived so long (he is about three-score and ten) at the staid old Somerset Club, and who married the attractive widow Brooks a month or so ago (we decline to state the lady's age, because no woman should admit being over 35) on the Cape, has arrived in Boston and the older generation, bless them, are dining an wining the happy bride and bridegroom. She was Mrs. Frederick Brooks, you remember.

* * *

Last evening a very smart dinner party of the Forbes' friends, Lady Mary and Lady Dorothy, was given at the Somerset Club in honor of deputante niece, Phyllis Forbes, daughter of the Allan Forbes of Westwood . . . there were 30 young men and 30 young women and they later enjoyed the evening at the Follies.

* * *

Invitations are out for Jean Fuller's debut at the Algonquin Club, a tea on the Tuesday before Thanksgiving . . . Miss Fuller is one of this season's attractive debs.

* * *

Trip Abroad

MRS. JOHN E. THAYER, JR., and her two charming daughters, Miss Evelyn and Miss Katherine, debutantes of this last and a previous season, are sailing for Europe immediately after Thanksgiving to spend the winter abroad.

* * *

Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott has gone on to New York to see her daughter Edith, who is training to be a nurse . . . we hear that the attractive Edith has contracted a cold and mother is going over to see that good old New England methods are used to dispel it.

* * *

Mrs. Katharine Winslow McCagg and her children have left for a dude ranch in the West . . . the children will be put in a ranch school while the beautiful Katherine takes long rides to forget a page of history.

* * *

Mrs. Freeman Hinckley has taken her daughter out of Miss Windsor's School (after all the fuss and feathers of getting her in) and they will spend the winter in her home city, Chicago.

FASHION SHOWS CONTINUE TO HOLD the interest of debutantes and here we have three of this season's group modelling the latest styles in furs. Miss Margaret Blake, daughter of the William O. Blakes, who makes her debut in January, is wearing a fur jacket with high collar and a muff. Her sister deb, Miss Muriel Rice, wears one of the new fur capes. Miss Susan Means, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Means, wears a new model full length coat. She has been guest of honor at many parties. (Boston American photos.)

'the social whirl'

With Dorothy Whipple Fry

OCCASIONALLY THERE IS an event on the social calendar that not only is a source of delight to attend, but after it is over you experience a sense of joy in retrospect, and a realization that not only has everyone had a rare good time, but also a worth-while one. Such was our experience on attending the Lowell House dance after the Army-Harvard game.

The committee on decoration had outdone themselves with clever ideas. The orchestra was entrenched with sandbags and barbed wire entanglements. While in one corner of the vast salon a scaffolding was raised topping with a white flag bearing the words in red letters, "I Surrender Dear," very ingenious, and all much appreciated by the many cadets in their close fitting blue uniforms who attended the affair.

The orchestra throbbed out the Army song, and the dance ended with a volly of drums and salute of guns. No detail was neglected. The Army mule was featured with his bright red electric eye in the window, silhouetted against a background of falling snow.

At 20 minutes to midnight the music stopped and through the hall a voice echoed, "All Cadets Must Leave Now." Five minutes later the blue uniforms had vanished. No pleading looks nor clinging hands detained them. We wondered if this discipline had anything to do with the type of football team the Army turns out?

To Prof. and Mrs. Julian Coolidge goes high praise for what they have achieved at these house affairs. Always interested lending her assistance and furthering the plans is charming Mrs. Coolidge. She is beloved by all the young people, and it is a delight to see her dancing with the boys of her house, and enjoying it as much as the gayest young deb. She graced the receiving line with the other hostesses wearing a soft green frock that was most becoming.

Among those who enjoyed this delightful party was Miss Jane Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Smith of Brookline, in an Army grey frock. We could not but ask her why the Army colors, at which she laughed and pointed out with alacrity that the frock boasted redeeming touches of crimson velvet.

WHAT MAKES THE SCREEN STARS SHINE? -:- LOVELY FOOTGEAR DESERVES SLIM ANKLES

Advice Given Them by Stylists Is Yours---Merely Watch Stars' Garb Carefully

(Auther [illegible] last-minute fashions from New York—the style center of America.)

By Victoria Gaines

HOW DO they do it—those glamorous stars who glitter and gleam across the screen? What is it about these fascinating, scintillating creatures that makes the Best Boy Friend squirm in his seat at the movies until we are positively pale with envy? We've often wondered—what really makes the screen stars shine?

Well very often, of course, it's their clothes—among other things. No other women in the world are as carefully dressed as these famous actresses—every line, every detail of a dress is cleverly calculated to bring out their best points. Where ordinary women suffer in silence for their fashion mistakes—and wear and wear—and wear them, because they must—the glorified clotheshorse of the screen is never allowed to appear in anything unbecoming, no matter how atrocious her own taste may be. She doesn't dare depend upon her personal preferences—in fact, many of our best-dressed divinities would be frightful-looking frumps if they did! That's where the studio stylist steps in—and pins and snips and stitches her into a masterpiece of chic.

* * *

About the best thing you can do [illegible] stenographer without a staff of fashion sharks at your service is to pick out the screen star whose type most closely resembles yours [illegible] of the [illegible] one of these [illegible] they were shown [illegible] adorable frock [illegible] worn by petite Sally [illegible] you're the [illegible] type that the [illegible] couldn't [illegible] than in this frock—a sleeky-fitted, sheath-like affair of black satin, topped by an amusingly huge ruched scarf of black tulle dotted in chenille.

* * *

Or if you're dark and dashing and dramatic, in the Dolores del Rio manner, you couldn't do better than the net-and-lace evening gown she will wear in "Flying Down to Rio." It has the new ruffled sleeves that are slipped on separately from the frock itself—quite like a Spanish cavalier's sleeve ruffles. And it has a spray of black velvet flowers splashed down one shoulder.

Of them all, however, we liked best a Joan Crawford frock that could be worn by anyone—being just an ordinary gal ourselves. It was a black velvet dinner gown—long-sleeved, low-backed and with the new high ruffled neckline encircled by a necklace of white gardenias. Perfectly plain, yet strikingly effective, as could be seen from the crowd of eager shoppers clustered around it. And we know just the garden-trimmed dinner hat we'd wear with it.

And to prove that screen styles aren't always [illegible] paper and [illegible] affairs, there's a very [illegible] that could be worn right down to the office [illegible] the front with the crepe creeping up on the lame [illegible] a deep V. That a couple of crepe buttons and [illegible] collar of the lame and [illegible] as charmingly costumed as the lovely [illegible] Lang, who originally wore [illegible]

Round-Toed Shoes Flatter Feet

By PRUNELLA WOOD

EVERY woman whose foot is on the long side knows that a short-vamp shoe would look perfectly lovely on it— but try to get one that fits! One cannot crowd a long vamp foot into a short vamp shoe any more than one can wear a left shoe on a right foot. But what the determined shopper can do is to sleuth out shoes built to fit the long foot, but with their streamlines slightly subdued by rounded toes. They work like a charm: they are as comfortable as gloves, they can be very ornate or purely utilitarian in their style. And—they take off illusionary inches from number 8's and longer sizes!

One of the seasonal successes in shoes for the long foot is the plethora of eel gray models. There is a color which has none of the hazy magnifying indefiniteness of a pale gray shoe which tends to make any foot look larger, and on top of that it is also a shade which can be worn with many other gray tones, and with brown or black clothes.

The costume sketched at the right shows an eel gray velvet skirt topped with a [illegible] gray satin tunic, and footed with eel gray seven-eyelet oxfords, size eight and one-half. From top to toe it is literally [illegible] a softly gleaming example of the very wearable long sleeved costume for dining out.

Trousseau Linens for Today

THE HOPE chest over whose contents many of us (yes, you and the girl next door and the girl next door to her) toiled and moiled is obsolete as a Stanley Steamer.

The fashion for caching linens until they become out-dated horrors is a thing of the past, praise be. Except, naturally, during the very short and definite actual engagement when there is a hectically joyous period of preparing for the new home.

Otherwise a well-padded bank account has proved the best hope chest substitute. Allow me to become the skeptic for a split-second—if things go ph-t-t-t you'll go farther in Europe on a bank book than you will on a sumptuous hope chest.

But when everything is settled for 1933 or early 1934, you will want to know what the essentials of a linen trousseau of today are. For a [illegible] working start [illegible] are in the position [illegible] fine linen sheets [illegible] the following [illegible]

One dozen [illegible] 1 dozen matching pillow cases, 2 breakfast sets, 2 [illegible] 2 dinner cloths, 1 tea cloth with a dozen napkins, 1 dozen cocktail napkins [illegible] towels [illegible] [illegible]

There Is a Way to Take Off an Inch

Stop and Listen

Question: I have been putting weight on every week for the last two months. Don't believe I am eating differently and can't account for the scales running away with me like this. Have you a diet you can send me?

M. N., Boston

Answer: [illegible] of fresh orange juice.

Mae West Curves

Question: Will you tell me how to have the Mae West chest? What exercises are best? Also, how to massage the forehead to eliminate lines going up and down?

C. H. P., Gloucester

Answer: [illegible] not achieved [illegible] for exercise. Massage the forehead from the top of the nose with both hands and let the fingers rub the scowl [illegible] the hair at the temples. Pieces of court plaster will keep the forehead smooth while sleeping.

Slender Ankles

Question: Will you please give me some exercises for reducing the ankles. Also would you tell me what to do for my skin, the powder flakes on it.

Miss P. C., Quincy

Answer: For reducing your ankles, try the foot exercise of pretending to pick up feathers while balancing on your tip toes and throwing them away. Sounds silly but it is very effective. Also riding a bicycle or jumping a rope—imaginary if you wish—are good. Use a face cream to give your skin the necessary oils to avoid powder flaking.

Aquarium Makes Living Portrait

Dramatic use of color—near-emerald green, white and silver—an aquarium built into the wall, and a preponderance of white antique leather make one of the most interesting Neo-classic rooms to be seen in New England.

By Annice Brink

PORE OVER the card room shown—if you're an ardent decorator it will do you more good than a treatise on modern decoration. It is loaded with ideas, workable on a simpler or grander scale as you wish.

Here is modernism that saves undisturbed the gentle traditions of home-loving people through the centuries. Yet it is electrically alive, a thrilling room to see and desire. Surely that calls for several huzzahs in the face of freak forms that called themselves "modernistic," and while they occasionally exhilarated, were more frequently annoying to sensitive people.

The furniture is directoire, and the lavish use of antique white leather is today's most pleasant and gracious fashion.

It's an overworked adjective—but you'll murmur "striking" when you see the color scheme. Deep and brilliant jade green wall paper, verging on emerald, with a dull silver Greek key design, is set off with white in draperies, furniture, dado and lamp shades.

Over the fireplace mantel is built in a living picture—the ripple of brightly colored fish among swaying greens and golden sand is illuminated by hidden lights on top, and by indirect rays from white alabaster urns on either side.

Highly original draperies are of white linen with the beautiful simplicity of the Greek key design in silver-grey braid. The cornices are treated in the same way.

Increasingly popular are the half-shutter screens and the cross bar and star directoire tables.

If you'd like to see this lovely room for yourself, please inclose a self addressed, stamped envelope with your request, and we will be glad to tell you where it is.

Time to Think of Winter Sports

By Margaret Matson

THEY'VE BEEN [illegible] Pinnacle Notch [illegible] seasoned sportsmen [illegible] too early to put the base wax on our own skis and get our sports clothes in readiness. A long "hard" winter is predicted, perfect for the person who loves to play in the snow.

* * *

Our recipe for comfort in winter sports is this: Light weight woolen underwear—not necessarily long sleeves and legs, but you can have them if you please. Next a little cotton broadcloth shirt. We always feel cleaner in a fresh shirt than in having sweaters next to ourselves.

Then one or two or even three light weight sweaters—the under ones, slip-ons, the outer ones cardigans perhaps—for ease in removing them en route.

* * *

Ski trous in gabardine we like best because they're wind-proof, water-proof and slippery enough not to let the snow cling.

Three pairs of woolen socks—or two if they fit your shoes better.

* * *

Two pairs of mittens (a dry pair to put on after lunch).

A warm but not too heavy jacket or a parka. A snug cap not fuzzy.

There you are!

May I Have This Dance, Sir?

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am writing to you for your decision. We are five married couples and we get together about once a month at someone's house for a good time. But when it comes to dancing, some of the men have to be asked. I want to know if it is correct for the ladies to ask them to dance? A says it isn't, but I think it is all right because we know each other very well.

E. A. B.

What lazy husbands . . . I'm afraid they are feeling the depression. Now that leap year is over perhaps they will mend their ways and do their social duty by asking the ladies to dance and not have to be urged in this contrary-to-convention manner. I agree with A, that it's out of order for the ladies to take the initiative about this invitation.

PANDORA TELLS YOU

DEAR PANDORA:

I am a young man of 21, hopelessly in love with an older woman. She seems to [illegible] teasing with me [illegible] whenever I try to tell her how [illegible] love her she laughs [illegible] the subject. She [illegible]

[illegible] sophisticated type, and has many suitors but I don't think any of them love her as deeply as I do. I've never felt this way about a woman before. I simply can't abide girls my age and I know that I'll never love another as I do Nadine even though she is 20 years my senior.

Pandora, you must know some way I might induce this woman I love to take me seriously. It's terribly embarrassing when she laughs at me. Naturally, it disconcerts me and then I start blushing which gives her the chance to twit me about my youth and all that sort of thing. Of course it simply spoils everything. It takes all the romance out of everything and I do actually feel raw and gawky and ridiculous. Now, Pandora, if you would spare me great unhappiness please tell me how to [illegible] And don't [illegible] too old for me.

Dear Bill:

[illegible] too old for [illegible] I [illegible] to you that you're so delightfully young and flattering that when you're around she probably forgets her need of a facial uplift and a soft, shaded lights and drops a dozen or more years like a letter down a mail-shoot. I ask you, Bill, isn't life quaint?

PANDORA.

Some people who are afraid they may be suspected of not knowing how to spell, say the "t" in self-defense.

BURGLARS ROB EVERYBODY, EVEN THE UNDERTAKER

This Is Life

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

Some years ago a good many people considered it rather scandalous that the death and funeral of Rudolph Valentino should have crowded off the news pages, as it did, the death and funeral of Charles William Eliot, former president of Harvard

This past week we have seen, in lesser and less striking degree the same phenomenon. Texas Guinan had in her death as much publicity as her heart could have desired If her cherished dream of a night club funeral had been carried out, who knows what the results might have been? Even as it was, her funeral was scandalous in its vulgarity and violence on the part of the mob. And yet, in spite of all the attempts that have been made to glorify her in death, the woman was not an admirable character nor engaged in an admirable work. She was a fitting symbol for the most sensual and irrational age of modern times and the harm she did, by example at least, was not inconsiderable

* * *

Just as she was being buried the newspapers were carrying brief and insignificant obituaries of a man whose life meant more to the amusement world of America than a hundred Texas Guinans The contrast is not between a moving picture actor and a great educator; it is between two people in the amusement world — the Guinan and Milton Aborn, the man whose name will always be connected with the idea of popular priced opera in English.

Texas Guinan provided hectic and unwholesome amusement for wealthy suckers for a few years of an abnormal era. For 50 years Milton Aborn provided the most splendid kind of rational and pleasurable entertainment to almost three generations of our people. He was 70 years old and he had been connected with the production of light opera and grand opera for half a century.

In so far as the rank and file of the American people have any knowledge at all of the classic operas and light operas, particularly of Gilbert and Sullivan, they owe it more to Milton Aborn than to any other single figure. The great Metropolitan and Chicago opera companies were based on the assumption that opera is a millionaire's amusement, chiefly important in its social angles, but and for the person of modern means prohibitive in price.

* * *

The folly and stupidity of managing opera on such a basis in America is shown by the fact that at the first breath of the depression the Chicago Opera collapsed like a house of cards—Insull's marked cards—while the Metropolitan all but went bankrupt and was able to survive, even for a few weeks every year, only by the most heroic effort and the most blatant beggary on the part of everyone concerned.

Meanwhile, for 50 years, more or less, Milton Aborn was carrying his popular priced opera companies all over the United States to the pleasure and edification of thousands of our people. The singers were seldom great stars; the productions were frequently a bit shabby; the orchestras were small. But, for small investments those productions paid big dividends, bigger than the fashionable organizations. And, since Milton Aborn went right on producing, they must have paid him, too, at least a moderate return

No one who ever went to the old Castle Square a generation ago to hear its opera repertory with Clara Lane and her husband will underestimate the value of Aborn's work. That, I believe was not Aborn's enterprise Later, when I was an undergraduate, he took the same Castle Square for a long series of grand and comic operas, from which I learned almost all I know about opera today. His productions were never superlative, but they averaged as high in musical skill and intelligence as the ordinary travelling dramatic company averages in dramatic effectiveness. In Gilbert and Sullivan he may not have attained the fine artistry of a Winthrop Ames production, but by and large Aborn did more to keep alive those unique musical satires than Ames or any producer

* * *

The cumulative effect of his 50 years' service on the American musical taste and musical knowledge is almost beyond estimate I have no way of estimating it I only know how much I owed in my own single case to his enterprise. The sooner Texas Guinan is forgotten, the better. The longer Milton Aborn is remembered—and his example followed—the better

In the fine old Roman phrase He deserved well of the Republic And the Republic can best show its gratitude by supporting his successor. For he will have a successor.

MORE FEDERAL STRAW LOANS ARE HINTED

Justice Agents Give McCann New Secret Information

Additional information relative to alleged irregularities in the closed Federal National Bank and affiliates was laid today before Asst U. S. Atty-Gen Irving G. McCann by Department of Justice agents at his office in the Federal building

The nature of this was not disclosed. McCann said it would be furnished to the grand jury when it convenes Nov. 23 to probe deeper into bank cases It was hinted in other sources that the new discoveries involve more 'straw men' in the making of loans.

Investigators have been delving recently into realty matters and drug stores alleged to be operated by "straw men" on large loans procured through bank officials and charged up to a miscellaneous account in which certain lawyers are interested

Included in the realty angle is said to be loans to parties interested in land deals a few years ago, which eventually resulted in large financial losses to buyers and links more "straw men" in the alleged transactions.

McCann refused to discuss the new turn of affairs in the investigation, except to say the grand jury has been summoned to meet

Whether the information came from the office of Atty. Gen. Joseph Warner no one at the Federal building would say, though it [illegible] known that H Larue Brown recently appointed a special assistant attorney-general, has been observing the liquidation of the State banks.

Leonids, meteors and other astral bodies—so far as they affect a field and playground in Jamaica Plain, puzzled scientists, police and residents of that section today

The problem came with the second mysterious "explosion" in three months that left no trace but was accompanied by a huge column of smoke, or what appeared to be smoke

With the skies due to furnish a display of leonids tonight and Thursday night, close watch will be kept in the expectation that another visit might be made by some astral body

STORES LODGE PROTEST ON MILK CODE

Board Meets to Give Relief as Ban Is Demanded

Milk was to join liquor as a subject of legislative controversy today, as the arbitration board of the industry held a first meeting with Director Frederick B. Snyder

Representative Christian A. Herter of Boston was to file in the special session of the legislature, a resolution calling on Dr. Arthur W Gilbert, state commissioner of agriculture, to cancel the Greater Boston milk code

CODE CHANGES LOOM

Informed the resolution cannot receive consideration during the special session Herter said he would file it anyway, and introduce the measure again at the next regular session

At the same time the arbitration board was to consider changes in the New England milk code. One possibility was believed to be the exemption of hundreds of local dairymen within the Greater Boston area who retail their own milk, from code provisions

At the dinner meeting of the annual tour by New Hampshire grange members of the Boston markets, Director Snyder warned against the sale of home-delivered milk at 11 cents a quart instead of 12 cents

"An unfavorable trend in this direction is developing in the home delivered market," he said "It is of great importance that this should be checked or it surely will result in a lowered price to the farmers"

Snyder declared the milk marketing agreement will prove itself so fair to both consumer and farmer if given a 12-month trial that all New England would cry out if any attempt to break it down were made after that time

STORES FILE PROTEST

His address came after the First National Stores, Inc announced the filing at Washington of an application asking for relief from the terms of the milk code

They claimed the code will work an injustice to persons [illegible] to pay a higher price for milk and will thereby defeat its own purpose by increasing the surplus amount of milk

The application which contains lengthy argument in defense of its proposition, was filed with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and directed to Henry A Wallace, secretary of agriculture

THAT GIRL FROM NEW YORK -:-

Jerry and Eden Leave for His Home Town in Vermont; Jake Sends Her Gardenias

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Lovely, young Eden Lane and handsome Jerry Evan, a banker fall in love on sight. Eden would not allow Jerry to kiss her the day they met, as she wanted whatever happened between them to be important—not casual. Five years before, following a disastrous love experience, Eden had come to New York. She obtained a position with an advertising concern and that, together with the income from her mother's estate, permitted her to live comfortably. Her popularity was assured, for not only was she beautiful and fascinating to men but she was an amusing companion who was stimulating [illegible]. After two years in New York, she met Jake Pierson, an undemonstrative sort who aroused ardor by his lack of it. He proposed to Eden, but, while she enjoyed his companionship thoroughly, she did not love him. Following Eden's rejection, Jake disappeared. When next she saw him he was married, but his wife had gone to Arizona for her health. Jerry and Eden are finally married in New York and spend a four-day honeymoon at Atlantic City. Then they return to New York. Jerry writes a letter to his mother, telling her of his marriage. Elizabeth Prentiss, Jerry's hometown girl friend, is stunned by the news of his marriage. In New York Eden and Jerry have had their first quarrel that preceded a party at a friend's shore home. Jake accompanied them on the party where Jerry met Lola. Jerry and Lola disappear at the party and Jake has to take Eden home. The next day Jerry loses his [illegible] and they prepare to go back to Jerry's home town in Vermont [illegible] mother and Anne gives them a farewell party.

NOW CONTINUE THE STORY

Eden [illegible]. When she [illegible] tired, a little flat. "You're probably quite right, Jerry. Only it's a little hard to see it that way when you have been as good friends as Jake and I were. I should like to have had him kiss me, but I can see that it is probably much better that he didn't. Would you have cared Jerry?"

Jerry laughed shortly. "Of course I would have cared! I'm no d——d philanthropist. I should have been as jealous as hell."

"Even when you know you'd have no reason to be."

"Even then," admitted Jerry, and found her mouth and kissed it himself.

The next d[illegible] fusion of [illegible] calls, fran[illegible] of the [illegible] came and he[illegible] minute pack[illegible] them and pac[illegible] food to take [illegible] rained fretfully and persistently all day. "I wish it wouldn't," Eden kept repeating wistfully, "it makes everything so much worse."

At [illegible] Four of th[illegible] white in a [illegible] box. The b[illegible] had a Fifth ave[illegible] label. "He shouldn't have done it," Eden said, lifting [illegible] from their paper [illegible] bering ra[illegible] they had [illegible] corner [illegible] buy a [illegible] cost [illegible] been—[illegible] but qu[illegible]

Jer[illegible] her face, said, "There's a note, Eden." And fished it out of the box and handed it to her. Then he went out to the kitchenette to shake up [illegible].

Eden read [illegible] one of the high [illegible] kitchen [illegible] Jerry laughing [illegible] cubes [illegible] splash[illegible] dow [illegible] the str[illegible] scurr[illegible] beetle[illegible]

Crushed Note Finds [illegible]

The note was [illegible]: "I won't be at the train, Eden—good-by and good luck."

She took it out into the kitchen and handed it to Jerry. "Jake won't be at the train," she said, and put the gardenias into an empty mayonnaise jar.

"Too bad," remarked Jerry, letting the note drift onto the enameled table.

The cleaning w[illegible] there the next [illegible] to clean the [illegible] it in the [illegible] shiny florist [illegible] with her [illegible] sort of pretty [illegible]

Eden clung to th[illegible] any shelf below [illegible] in the women's [illegible] applied lipstick [illegible] mouth and then [illegible] despair—[illegible] shadows beneath [illegible] whiteness of her [illegible] resignedly she [illegible] longings a[illegible] sleeping ca[illegible]

She [illegible] of the w[illegible] wondered [illegible] such [illegible] in the was[illegible]. Disma[illegible] the double [illegible]

[illegible] contemplated the flying landscape [illegible] she could see enough of it to know it was not without charm. Even on a drenched November morning, its hillside stripped of color, its fields barren and rough, its sky a sulky gray blanket, it still managed to achieve a certain beauty.

"I'd like to have seen it in September," Eden thought swiftly. I'd like to have spent a day on that little hillside back there—lying flat on my back—staring up through those silver birches at a sharp blue September sky—"

She thought suddenly that she knew very little about the country. She had always lived in cities—or in the suburbs of cities. She had lived in apartments and hotels and one year in an Italian convent and [illegible] an American [illegible]. She had never lived in a house—unless you counted the [illegible] chateau they had rented [illegible] year in France—the year her mother had fallen in love with Nick.

Eden Dreaded Memory of Year

[illegible] that year [illegible] she had never [illegible] to [illegible] young [illegible] things to her [illegible]. In [illegible] years [illegible] suddenly in [illegible] Ohio and left [illegible] her mother [illegible] been [illegible] a great many [illegible] had never been [illegible] That [illegible] She had been [illegible] amuse [illegible] She had been [illegible] with [illegible] pending money, with traveling [illegible] being in the [illegible] of expensive noise and laughter and excitement. Then [illegible] winning she had met Nick and [illegible] After that everything was different. Everything was more [illegible] and more exciting. She spent a lot of money on Nicky and [illegible] seemed happy. Eden always thought of her mother during this period with a suffocating sense of mingled admiration and pity. She had been [illegible] and [illegible] eyes had been haunted [illegible] when she [illegible] Nick there was sometimes a look in them that Eden [illegible] such a [illegible] frightened look. I was never the [illegible] after Nicky [illegible] became bored and drifted [illegible]. After [illegible] her mother's [illegible] were hard [illegible] and [illegible] expressionless. Even when [illegible] had been drinking too much [illegible]

Good Result of Unusual Bidding

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A Good Result of an Unorthodox Bid

Mr. Thomas H. Avery of Le Roy N. Y., always prefers to bid the shorter suit first when holding two suits of biddable length. Expert opinion is that such bidding is unsound, except when the hand itself is so weak that its holder does not wish to show a higher ranking suit at the range of two and thus force partner, who may prefer the lower ranking suit, to bid three as a matter of preference. However Mr. Avery's propensity for bidding the shorter suit first, coupled with the bad play of the Declarer, brought him a most unusual result on a hand he played defensively.

South, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable. North-South part-score 60.

North:
♠ [illegible]8
♥ [illegible]94
♦ K Q J 7 6 2
♣ J 7

West:
♠ [illegible]7 6 4 3
♥ [illegible]6
♦ [illegible]
♣ 4

East:
♠ [illegible]5
♥ Q 8 3 2
♦ [illegible]3
♣ K Q [illegible]3 2

South (Mr. Avery):
♠ K Q J 2
♥ K J 7
♦ 10
♣ A [illegible]8 6 5

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ (1) | Pass | 2 ♦ (2) | Pass |
| 2 N T | Pass | Pass | 3 ♣ (3) |
| Double (4) | Pass | Pass | Pass |

(1) Unquestionably, a bid of one club ordinarily would be much better with South's hand as it permits the exchange of information at the range of one and at the same time the hand is strong enough to justify a bid of two spades should partner respond to the Opening bid with one notrump.

(2) North's hand contains 3½ honor tricks and ordinarily would justify a Force. However, North decides that a mere Takeout is sufficient due to the part-score, to insure further bidding, and is not anxious to make a Forcing Takeout because of the shortness of the spade suit bid by his partner.

(3) A dangerous Overcall. The hand, it is true, contains two-plus honor tricks, but it appears hopeless from the standpoint of defense and may result most disastrously as in fact it did.

(4) Here Mr. Avery reaps the rare reward for his unusual bidding.

The Opening lead was the singleton diamond Ten, which was won with the Ace by East, who then made the mistake of seeking to clear the club suit.

South won the trump lead with the Ace, and then laid down the spade King. North properly overtook this and returned the small spade, which South won. As all the spades were in sight in his own hand and the Dummy Mr. Avery now led his small spade upon which his partner played the Knave of trumps, forcing East's Queen. East still was intent upon the establishment of the trump suit so led a small trump, which South won with the 8, returning the spade Queen. This was the Declarer's last trick, as Mr. Avery was now able to draw his last trump and the North and South partnership then won the remaining tricks.

The penalty for bad overbidding and equally inaccurate play totaled 2700 points.

Today's Question

North and South vulnerable. The bidding:

| South | North |
|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | 2 [illegible] |
| ? | |

You, South, hold:

♠ A Q J 6 4 ♥ 3 ♦ A 9 8 3 2 ♣ Q 4

What do you bid?

Answer: Two spades. This hand is not sufficiently strong to show your second suit, particularly when partner responds with your singleton suit. Your spade suit is rebiddable and it probably will be of greater value to show this to your partner than to show him you have a biddable diamond suit. In addition, to show this diamond suit would entail a bid at the level of three-odd, and if your partner has a weak hand with practically all his strength massed in hearts a severe penalty might very well be incurred.

WHOLE NATION WILL HEAR WARING MUSIC IN BOSTON

Pennsylvanians on Air Here Tonight

By N. F. T.

Pumping questions at the debonair Fred Waring is what that mild mannered young man of music actually relishes having one do. According him full and deserved credit for the fact, it might be added that the interrogative one need not be an attache of the working press. He was being asked about his big cigarette program that goes coast to coast, WNAC at 10 tonight, as duly [illegible] as the four winds out of our fair city. Moreover, the inquiry was capably conducted by a non-writing dressing room guest, somehow or other having gained entrance backstage at the Metropolitan Theater. That's where Fred and his "Pennsylvanians" are playing in person—and how! Meaning five stage shows today instead of the usual four.

* * *

SO HE WILL TALK!

Pressed to state what he considered would be the highlight of tonight's weekly half hour, Fred replied: "Well, we are of course proud of this Moran and Mack combination, with their 'Two Black Crows' comedy. We also thoroughly appreciate having David Ross as our announcer. Then there is that deepening 'Where Is Elmer?' mystery. It's something the Legionnaires started during their Chicago convention this year. Poly McClintock, our frog-voiced member, has an important bit of humorous sleuthing to do on that score this evening. An unusual arrangement of the search for [illegible] Elmer should prove a real radio novelty full of wholesome fun and expressive harmony." Next came a surprise. Fred made known how Poly of the deep tones also works with the Waring quartet and sings high tenor—imagine!

* * *

No orchestra overlord now enjoying network fame is more modest than Fred Waring. Asked what principle he applies and to what fundamental does he credit the distinctive type of tune making for which his outfit has become so famous, the essence of logic flavored his explanation. "We strive always to be expressive to the fullest degree rather than trick." Fred makes no bones about not gaining admittance to the College Glee Club at Penn State. He merely adds and almost shyly that he forthwith formed his own musical group. This present Pennsylvanians orchestra is the [illegible] outgrowth of [illegible] organization. Their [illegible] "[illegible] Sleep," was written by a [illegible] organist of Philadelphia. It was composed as a hymn 49 years ago. That was Adam Geibel who is still living.

* * *

SPRINGING SURPRISE

Numerous interesting bits about young Waring were jotted down. These unbeknown to Fred, since your [illegible] the outside listening in scribe was mingling in a corridor crowd near his door. Last among the notes thus netted was one about talking by telephone with his mother following every broadcast. It seems [illegible] tells Fred things from the home town of Tyrone, Pennsylvania. Waring was much [illegible] back when thanked for an [illegible] interview obtained in [illegible] fashion. After all, the [illegible] was just a friend of some friend and had no widely read [illegible] place to put in print what he extracted. However, he did one swell job of saving time for Fred Waring and genuinely grateful N. F. T. We concurred there.

Deserter Joins Legion and Firemen Let Him Go

Official orders may be promulgated and [illegible] constructed, addresses changed by ukase and all the rest, but none of these means a thing to Siren [illegible] back [illegible]

They mean in fact [illegible] that Siren has changed his [illegible] to [illegible] from the Boston fire department to the American Legion.

When the new building for Engine 37 was constructed at Huntington ave. and Ruggles st. and the firemen moved over from the old structure at Brookline and Longwood aves., they took Siren with them.

But that didn't suit Siren at all and he ambled back to the old building. Each time he was rescued and taken to his new quarters he strolled right back again. He knew his home grounds and nobody could tell him different.

Today in the biting cold and chill wind Siren was found snuggled in against the front door of the old firehouse again by Dick Sears, newsreel cameraman and an officer of Oliver Ames Post, American Legion, which has been given the old firehouse for use as legion post quarters.

Sears took the kitten inside, where steamfitters are installing a new heating system and later the legionnaires [illegible] having [illegible] on their wanderings. Siren [illegible] he was christened [illegible] and took his place on a window sill to sun himself.

CREW ABANDON SHIP IN GALE

New York, Nov. 15 (INS).—Crippled by a storm raging in the North Atlantic, the British freighter S[illegible]by, a 3,600 ton vessel with a crew of 30, out of West Hartlepool, England, was abandoned by her crew today, according to a wireless received by the Radiomarine Corporation here.

At the same time radio reports told of difficulties being encountered by the British vessel [illegible] in [illegible] with [illegible] steering gear [illegible] approximately 400 miles off the West Coast of Ireland.

Abandonment of the S[illegible] in a position about 35 miles off the English Channel and the plight of the St. Quentin were received in messages from the liner City of Havre. The latest [illegible] was received shortly after 8:30 A. M.

Kansas Votes Repeal

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 15—By a vote of 75 to 24, the Kansas House has accepted and sent to the Senate a resolution to submit repeal of the State's prohibition amendment to a popular vote in November, 1934.

"I was ADRIFT in BOSTON for a fact!"

I had just arrived in Boston for the first time from New York. I knew no one here and, of course, knew nothing about the city. Frankly, I was discouraged because it was absolutely essential that I economize at once and move into a furnished room where the rent would be low.

"Where could I find such a place and, more important, how soon? I happened to be reading The Boston Evening American, and glanced through the furnished room ads. With their convenient classification by district, they proved the answer to all my problems, for I found just the kind of a room I wanted that very day."

This young man's experience is typical of hundreds who have simplified the task of finding a nice furnished room by referring to American Want Ads. Every day you'll find a convenient directory of the nicest room vacancies in Boston.

Shore Makes a Confession and Ends a Wrangle ↑↓ Ross' Anger Melts as Star Admits Sentiment

By AUSTEN LAKE

Eddie Shore slouched in an underslung, sullen attitude in a corner of the Bruins' office, a leg swinging limply from his tilted chair and his lean features set in an uncompromising mask. Across the room Art Ross, his manager, crouched over a cluttered desk in the springy-kneed posture of a prosecuting attorney, his face muscles drawn into a tight pug and stabbing the air with his forefinger. There were flickers of heat lightning between the two as Ross' growly voice rolled on and Shore flicked back his crisp answers like the lash of a whip.

It was the final, inevitable showdown between the two, both men of cold, inflexible temper, before erasing their business feud and settling back to a comfortable friendship once more. As a confidential guest, discreetly inhaling a cigarette, I sat listening to the tide of battle ebb and flow, silently admiring the cool fury with which the men parried and thrust, each glowing over his lip writhings and measuring the other with a chill fury. Yet, sometimes unexpectedly, one or the other would break into a grudging grin and though he recognized this was merely a test of strength and was loathe to wound too deeply.

In a lull, while both manager and player were searching their minds for new fuel, I asked Shore, "What made you suddenly decide to join the Bruins at their original offer, after holding out so stubbornly?"

Shore swivelled his eyes, pin-points of white light between his puckered lids, and answered in a snarl, "That six to one beating Toronto gave the boys."

Well, this is a small shock, because only the previous afternoon while Shore was riding to Boston, Ross had fetched up the same theory and had suggested that it would make a grade A human interest story. Only I had cast it back in his teeth as ridiculous, because from rummaging around the sport pageant for a dozen years I have acquired a skepticism toward the motives of professional athletes, whom, as a class, I find to be one big stomach driven by their money appetites.

"It sounds like a publicity warm-up to welcome the prodigal son," I said to Ross.

"O. K.," said he, "but I am sincere, because in a pinch Shore would play this game for nothing. And I am plenty sore at him right now, too."

* * *

Eureka, a Sentimental Professional!

So now, in the middle of their pull and hawl, I think to catch Ross by the forelock by getting the brutal truth straight from Shore's lips. Because I expect to hear him say "I came because $7500 was the best I could get and it is better than cutting kindling wood at home." After which I would give Ross a curling sneer and a guttural "Heh! Heh!" And even when Shore says "That six to one beating, etc." I suspect Ross of framing the sentiment and give him the tail of my eye. But somehow there is a warm glow on his features and his tight pug has quite melted away. Also the spark of fury that was lately in his eye is replaced by a suspicious moisture.

"S'elp me heaven," he says lifting his waffle-shaped palm to the ceiling," I haven't said a word to Shore about that."

"About what?" demands Shore, still bristling and bulging with scrap.

So Ross relates his theory of the previous day and how I had scoffed at Shore's being affected by the Toronto score.

"Well," said Eddie, his eyes still smoking, "take it or leave it."

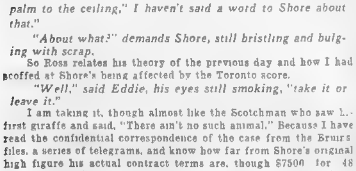
I am taking it, though almost like the Scotchman who saw his first giraffe and said, "There ain't no such animal." Because I have read the confidential correspondence of the case from the Bruins files, a series of telegrams, and know how far from Shore's original high figure his actual contract terms are, though $7500 for 48 hours of actual play during the entire season, is not such a hard dose to swallow. I have set my estimate of professional athletes by the standard of baseball, boxing and football, whose hirelings are incurable diehards who will keep up a steady moaning all season after their salary has been shaved. And I give you George Earnshaw, who set up a monotonous lament that lasted until, finally, Connie Mack sent him home for the rest of the year so that his sobs would not distract the other Athletic players.



And there was Gorilla Jones, the ex-middleweight champion, who performed in such a surly stew in a bout at Holyoke last winter that the state commission snatched his purse, and who complained afterwards, "Ah couldn't affohd to make a real fight fo' on'y $1200."

Well, after Shore's confession, what was left of his feud with Ross fizzled out and the two began making playful passes with their fists, like abashed schoolcubs. "You can't help but like the guy," said Ross later. "Good egg," asserted Shore while dressing for the game.

Scraping steel and cracking sticks contributed to make a hot scrap as our Bruins dropped their first game at home to the Detroit Red Wings, 4 to 2. Locals stormed goalie Roach's net in mad surges to win. But the Wings' defensive game was too tight. Eddie Shore, Bruins' recalcitrant, worked like a Trojan. To no avail.

MacLean, Tufts Star, May Leave College

By WALTER KILEY

Of tragic importance in the life of Raymond [illegible], outstanding halfback on the Tufts football team, is the news of his father's death at his home at South Portland, Me. [illegible] the natural grief which he feels at such a time and [illegible] he will be out of the Bowdoin game on which he [illegible] playing on Saturday [illegible] the greater fear that [illegible] will force him to forego the balance of [illegible] the present semester is completed in February.

Raymie is a junior in the College of Liberal Arts at Tufts. He has been the constant threat in the Jumbo backfield, one of the principal reasons for [illegible] eleven [illegible] the [illegible] small college team of New England.

Playing a halfback on offense and deep man on defense he came to the fore [illegible] as the present [illegible] opened. Whereas [illegible] was figured to be the main [illegible] of the running attack, MacLean has completely dominated the ball carrying [illegible] the expected accomplishments of the [illegible] who has been out of the game for the major portion of the year.

TEAM'S ACE SCORES

Raymie [illegible] touchdown against Colby [illegible] more against Middlebury [illegible] against Connecticut State [illegible] Jumbos won [illegible] yards and [illegible] against the later foes, Williams, New Hampshire and Boston University.

It seems that Raymie has been entirely dependent on his dad in the funds which kept him in college.

While he is employed as a waiter on table at one of the Tufts fraternity houses, this provides him with his board alone.

He has won several scholarships but most of his tuition [illegible] laboratory fees and [illegible] come from his dad whose unexpected death [illegible] grief stricken lad in a most serious plight unless some unforeseen help is forthcoming immediately.

In view of the fact that MacLean attended Hebron Academy in his prep school days, many of his former teammates are now members of the Bowdoin College team which Tufts is to face on Saturday.

MacLean had been looking forward to that encounter with joyful anticipation.

Naturally he will not be available. He left for his home yesterday immediately after the news of his dad's death and it is doubtful whether or not he will be in the right frame of mind to take part in the Jumbos' final encounter with Mass. State a week later.

By an odd co-incidence, Herman Guager, captain of the Tufts varsity soccer team received word only a short time after MacLean that his father had also died unexpectedly, which means [illegible] be missing from [illegible] a center forward [illegible] game [illegible] of varsity at Tufts [illegible] this afternoon at [illegible]

Guager, who [illegible] College of Liberal Arts [illegible] turned to his home in [illegible] ton, Mass.

Haverhill earlier in the season spoiled Malden's hopes for a clean slate by upsetting the powerful Malden team. This week Haverhill hopes to work again as record wrecker by spilling Lawrence. Which is a difficult assignment for any team.

Twin Brothers Are Football Foes

Middletown, Ct., Nov. 15—When Wesleyan and the University of Rochester meet on the football field at Rochester this week there will be an interesting coincidence in that the directors of physical education of the two institutions are twin brothers. Both are also physicians.

Dr. Edgar Fauver is director at Wesleyan and Dr. Edwin Fauver at Rochester. They were undergraduates together at Oberlin where both played on the football team and they received their medical training together at Columbia. They resemble each other in appearance and it is with difficulty that the students of the two Universities can tell them apart.

Coach Jim Oberlander gave the Wesleyan squad another afternoon off today in order that the men can get over the effects of the recent Williams contest.

GRID PACKERS MADE TOWN FAMOUS

By JOE CASHMAN

Those Green Bay Packers, next Sunday's opponents of the Redskins, were playing pro football way back when—well, when it was little short of treason to mention the pastime in these precincts.

And may we call to the attention of George "Long-Live-Linen" Marshall the record of this eleven from the Wilds of Wisconsin.

George frets if his Redskins lose one game. [illegible] may live long, but he won't, if it takes his gridiron prides as long to win their first championship as it took the Green Bays.

The famed Western outfit joined the league in 1921 and struggled along until 1929 before finishing on top. Once there it defied all opposition to remove it, until it was evicted by the Chicago Bears last season.

FORMED AFTER WAR

The Green Bays were formed in 1918. They've owned their home town ever since. They are well-called "the pro team with the college spirit." They could hardly be otherwise. There is no college within counties of the community. The pros are Green Bay's college eleven, and the citizens finance the team and support it as loyally and rabidly as any university group backs its representatives.

Most of the Packers make the town their home all the year round. Every effort is made to find them permanent positions during the off-months.

Green Bay and the Chicago Bears and Cards are the only three clubs to survive the past hectic decade.

And over that stretch the Packers played 179 games, won 125, lost 3[illegible], tied [illegible], scored 2924 points, allowed only 812 and had a percentage of .775. [illegible] Notre Dame teams did [illegible] better than that.

The Packers aren't [illegible] the league after this season having the same record as the Redskins. Don't imagine for a moment, though, that they don't know their football and aren't bad news to any opposition.

Lone Star Dietz, Redskins' mentor, isn't making any mistake about it.

HERBER IS STAR

"Arnold Herber is the best passer in pro football," Dietz told his young men when they reported for practice at Fenway Park today.

"He can do everything that can be done with a football in the way of passing," continued Lonestar. "He'll toss 'em short and he'll toss 'em long; he'll toss 'em fast and he'll toss 'em slow. Blood, Dilweg or some other critter will pull 'em in no matter how they're tossed.

"So it's up to you lads to never lose sight of that Herber guy and see to it that you knock down those tosses. And when I say knock down, that's just what I mean. No touching the ball and then watching it fall in the lap of an enemy to lose the game such as happened to us in New York.

"You can beat the Packers if you stop these Herber passes. If you don't, the enemy will leave your remains scattered all over the Fenway Park scenery, which would be a very dirty trick on Tom Yawkey, who is spending a couple of fortunes to beautify the orchard."

Then Dietz went to work show[illegible] he thinks the [illegible] can [illegible] stopped.

The system looked good in practice but we prefer to withhold judgment on it until Sunday. There was no Herber doing the flinging out there today.

For reasons best known to himself Shore did not report at the Quebec training camp and it was felt that he was not physically ready to stand the grind for 60 minutes, but the Edmonton dynamo went through without a let up and turned in a great performance.

DAILY ROUNDUP

Gene Venzke, outstanding University of Penn miler and sophomore, will take part in his first varsity cross country run at the 25th annual six mile IC4A championships at Van Cortlandt Park, New York City next Monday. He will be the lone representative of Penn.

Venzke figures that the hill and dale work will condition him thoroughly for the arduous schedule of major mile races which he is slated to run indoors this winter.

Applications for the Boston College-Holy Cross football game, the first ever held at the new University Heights Stadium, must be filed by Saturday at the latest. In view of the records set by both teams it looks as though the Newton stands will be far short of adequate for the demands for seats. Graduate Manager John Curley of Boston College is expected to make some sort of arrangements for seating more than the 22,000 capacity of the present stands. He hopes to be able to take care of some 25,000 persons by game time.

Haverhill, Nov. 15.—St. James High of Haverhill has a brother combination on the football squad. Not unusual. But these brothers, Peter and Clayton Francis, happen to be fighting for the same position, right halfback. Which is unusual. Clayton [illegible] his the edge because of his good all around performance. Pete may be a star another season.

Harry Kelley, one of the best handlers of boxers in the country, will be unable to be in Sammy Fuller's corner when the latter meets Barney Ross in Chicago on Friday night on account of the illness of his mother. "The Garden can hold Dundee for his next title bout," pressed Ames. "And will go to court if necessary."

"Call all the coppers you want," replied Waxman, "and you won't get to first base. I will sign for the Callahan bout, but must get a guarantee of $10,000. Didn't I get $30,000 when Joe Dundee risked his championship against Jackie Fields."

"Talk sense," pleaded Ames. "That kind of money isn't around any more. Furthermore the Garden isn't guaranteeing anybody $10,000. Not even Carnera or Sharkey. Your contract calls for 37½ per cent for Dundee and that's all you're going to get no matter who meets Vince."

"You didn't tell that to the promoters when you got those $100,000 guarantees for Sharkey," shot back Waxman.

"Brouillard didn't ask a guarantee when he fought Dundee," went on Buckley.

"I don't happen to manage Brouillard," said Waxman sarcastically. "I like to see the money up before a fight, and then I do not have to worry about how much dough is going to be in the house. Dundee can lick Callahan, but wants to be well paid for the job."

"Callahan will fight Dundee for nothing and knock him out," said Buckley as he began to burn up. "Didn't he lick Brouillard a year ago. That show drew $21,000."

Methods Proposed for Inflation Outlined by Haney

By LEWIS HANEY

New York, Nov. 15.—It is apparent that a good many people believe in the devaluation of the [illegible] methods may be tried. Some would be more reasonable than others.

[illegible] any stand as to the merits of the things themselves, I would like to point out that much of the method and technique now used or proposed in our national experiment [illegible]

Two Economic Periods Studied

By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE,

This chart is instructive for two reasons. In the first place, it affords a comparison between two interesting periods in our recent economic history, the postwar period 1919-1923 and the six years comprising the great boom and depression, from 1928 to 1933. The second point relates to a matter that is but dimly comprehended by the layman as well as by our [illegible] who are at present seeking to find some way of [illegible] prices.

PRICE CHANGES PROVE NARROW FOR LEADERS

New York, Nov. 15—Price changes for leading shares today on the New York Stock Exchange proved mostly narrow. Dribbles of selling appeared from time to time, bringing reactions most mainly confined to fractions or a point or more.

Railroads, metals and public utilities displayed an easy tone. Trading ran at a volume considerably below yesterday's. A heavy tone in wheat was a restraining factor on bullish activities.

Announcement that Secretary Woodin will take a few months' leave of absence and that Henry Morgenthau, Jr., governor of the Farm Credit Administration, will succeed Dean Acheson as Under-Secretary of the Treasury, created little stir in market circles. Interest was expressed, however, in the authoritative statement that no change was contemplated in the present gold buying policy by which it is hoped to control commodity prices.

Shares ended the initial hour slightly above the lows with some losses ranging from 1 to 2 points. Allied Chemical and Eastman Kodak were down 2 points or more. Commonwealth & Southern was 2 points higher. American Can advanced a point.

Losses of a point or so came for Alaska Juneau, Atchison, Auburn, Bethlehem, Celanese, Consolidated Gas, Columbia Carbon, Ingersoll Rand, McKeesport, Union Pacific, United Aircraft, American Telephone and Western Union.

U. S. Steel eased.

Sales to 11 a. m. approximated 00,000 shares.

Prices improved moderately during the second hour. Chemicals displayed a better tone. Allied Chemical cancelling a 2-point loss. Oils experienced some demand.

Point or better gains showed for American Can, du Pont, Case and U. S. Smelting. Union Pacific, Auburn and Eastman were off a point or more.

Sales to noon approximated 530,000 shares.

Stocks were irregular in the third hour. Homestake was down over 7 points. Addressograph and Commonwealth & Southern rose 2.

Issues with gains of a point or better included American Can, American Commercial Alcohol, du Pont, Foster Wheeler, Amerada, Pullman, Macy, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Union Carbide. Losses of a point or more appeared for Alaska Juneau, Consolidated Gas, Corn Products, Eastman, McIntyre and Monsanto.

Sales to 1 p. m. approximated 120,000 shares.

Shares again started to decline in the fourth hour, but changes were still confined to a narrow range. Case Threshing was down more than 2 points. National Distillers and National Biscuit were firm, each issue showing a gain of better than a point.

Homestake Mining was down more than 7. Losses of a point or more ruled in American Smelting, Celanese, Consolidated Gas, Columbian Carbon and International Silver. Recessions of minor importance were shown for du Pont, U. S. Steel and United Aircraft.

Sales to 2 p. m. approximated 1,010,000 shares.

Boston Wool Mart Trade Has Pick-Up

"Demand for wool in Boston continues slow, but trading is more active than during the past two weeks on a few lines. Moderate quantities of twelve months Texas wools have moved at 81-82 cents, scoured basis, for choice wools and at 78-80 cents for average lines, unchanged from previous sales. Some houses are inclined to mark up asking prices even though they have not closed sales recently at the quotations which have prevailed for a month or more," says the Boston office of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

American Sugar's Regular Ordered

American Sugar Refining Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents on the common, payable January 2, to stock of record, December 5.

[illegible] authorized redemption on January 2, 1934, of $2,000,000 of the $30,000,000 issue of 6 per cent gold bonds due in 1937 at call price of 102½. This, together with previous redemption, will leave about $1,500,000 after January 2.

Columbian Carbon Net $1.44 a Share

Columbian Carbon Co. and subsidiaries report for nine months ended Sept. 30 net income of $777,978 after taxes, depreciation, depletion and minority interests, equivalent to $1.44 a share on 536,420 no-par stock. This compares with $669,363 or $1.24 a share in first nine months of 1932.

Stone & Webster Shows Increase For Cash

Stone & Webster, Inc., today reported its cash increased $1,805,500 during the past year. Loans have been reduced $4,702,500 from a year ago, or $2,473,500 during the nine months, and in addition thereto, an underlying bond issue of Puget Sound Power & Light Company, in the amount of $1,924,000 due June 1, was paid off.

About 60 per cent of the reduction in notes payable was accomplished through the sale around the year-end of bonds of Louisiana Steam Generating Corporation, a subsidiary of Engineers Public Service Co. Of the notes payable on Sept. 30, 1933, $2,857,000 represented borrowings of the Puget Sound Power & Light Company.

In the first nine months of 1933 preferred dividends of certain subsidiary companies amounting to $2,136,295 on an accrued basis have been deferred, bringing preferred dividends unpaid to a total of $2,861,771, of which $2,265,967 is in the Puget Sound Power & Light Company. Stone & Webster, Inc., has no funded debt, no preferred stock and no bank loans.

Subsidiary maturities through 1935 are as follows: July 1, 1934, $10,272,000 Virginia Railway & Power Company first 5s; Jan. 1, 1935, $1,193,000 Whatcom County Railway & Light first 5s, and Jan. 1, 1935, $169,000 Twin City Light & Power Co. first 6s.

The largest and only maturity in 1934 is an obligation of the Virginia Electric & Power Co., which is not borrowing any money and which enjoys an excellent credit rating, interest on its entire funded indebtedness currently being earned over 3.7 times before depreciation and 2.75 times after depreciation.

Oil Price Fixing Opposed

New York, Nov. 15—The independent oil companies' fight against Secretary Ickes' order to fix petroleum prices Dec. 1 has won strong support from outside the ranks of the independents in the oil industry as indicated by news dispatches quoting Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company (N. J.) as being opposed to price fixing, says Allen B. Tint, chairman of The Public Interest Committee of The Independent Oil Companies Alliance of America, an organization of more than 1000 independent oil refiners, distributors and service stations of the United States.

Typhoid Fever Preventable Disease

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

Dr. Copeland

NOT LONG ago I was dining in a restaurant specializing in sea food. My dinner companion hesitated to order clams. When I questioned him he said that only that morning he had read of an outbreak of typhoid fever, caused by infected mussels and clams. My friend was correctly informed but he was not familiar with all of the facts concerning the case.

The outbreak he referred to had been traced by the health department to clams and mussels dug by a family who lived near contaminated waters. Digging of shellfish was prohibited in this area because of sewage polution of the water. Despite these warnings, the diggers obtained a catch of mussels and clams and shortly afterwards were stricken with typhoid fever.

INFECTED SHELLFISH

Health authorities repeatedly warn against the dangers of eating shellfish from sewage-polluted areas. Inspectors are constantly on the watch to prevent the marketing of such shellfish. You can be assured that if you purchase shellfish in a reliable fish market, or order them in a clean restaurant, they have been inspected and come from an approved source.

As a result of this supervision and rigid inspection, typhoid fever is now a rare disease. It is a preventable disease and will eventually be completely eradicated. It is prevented by the purification of water and careful inspection of all foods and food handlers.

All persons who handle food are required by law in progressive communities, to be examined at periodic intervals. In this way typhoid carriers or persons who harbor the germs of typhoid fever, are located and prevented from spreading the disease. Typhoid carriers are a danger to the health of a community and every effort is made to place them under proper supervision.

ONCE A SERIOUS MENACE

Not so long ago typhoid fever was a serious menace to mankind. With the discovery of the typhoid germ and improved methods of sanitation, the disease is now entirely within the control of the health authorities. It is seldom that we hear of an outbreak of typhoid. When it does appear it can be traced to negligence, as in the case I mentioned.

In addition to hygienic measures, and rigid inspection of water and food supply, typhoid fever can now be prevented by the inoculations of the so-called "tripe vaccine." This vaccine gives protection against typhoid and para typhoid diseases.

It is an agent for good routinely used in the army and navy. It is recommended for all individuals who plan on traveling in countries where typhoid is prevalent or where the purity of the food and water cannot be guaranteed.

HEAR! HEAR!

Professor Dilloway Doakes, of Swamproot University, has long been recognized by Rotary Clubs of central Florida as one of the outspoken students of world affairs in the deep South. Never a man to mince words in an international crisis, Professor Doakes last week made a suggestion that may bring vast benefits to both the United States and Russia. "Why not," declared Professor Doakes, addressing the convention of the Left Handed Motormen of America, "recognize Russia without delay and send Huey Long to that vast, far-away country. This master stroke would put the Louisiana Senator far out of hearing for Americans and at the same time automatically assure the Russians an ample supply of soap—soft soap."

Put Recovery First, Mr. President!

To the extent that the activities of the Roosevelt Administration have offered a field holiday for radical visionaries, the process of economic recovery has been impeded.

The loading up of Government departments and special emergency administrations with impractical theorists, who are hostile to the American system, has spread confusion.

Accordingly, the high confidence of the Spring and early Summer has ebbed.

The psychological assets, which inhere in the willingness of the commercial, industrial and financial classes to co-operate, have been dissipated.

We appeal to President Roosevelt to act quickly to remedy this situation while there is yet time.

Two steps are urgently needed.

One is to clear the departments and emergency administrations promptly of the professional business baiters.

The second is the enunciation by the President of the doctrine that the making of a Utopia must be sidetracked until the country has convalesced from the scars of the depression.

Until business volume and employment reach normal proportions, the long-term controversial issues must be held in abeyance.

If the Administration is to achieve the mandate of the American people to accelerate economic recovery, such as is under way in various foreign countries, including Canada and England, it must begin to judge economic policies by their effect on near-term gross volume of business and employment.

Such a fresh orientation would entail new emphasis on the economically sound, business-building steps in the Roosevelt program, including bolstering up the purchasing power of farmers, stimulating the capital goods industry through acceleration of public works and through Government financial aid to private interests, mortgage relief to home owners, a managed currency along scientific lines, and strengthening the fountains of credit and inducing them to function again.

Such a clear definition of objectives would at the same time entail calling off the radical wolves in the Government service who have been rendering business men psychologically impotent to aid in recovery because of insidious breaking down of the American tradition.

The tall talk about revolution by young radicals in the NRA is well known.

The same spirit of hostility to private business, as such, extends to other Government services.

Specifically, there are divided counsels within the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

The President appointed George N. Peek, an experienced executive, in charge as Administrator.

Under his constructive leadership, definite progress has already been made, especially in regard to the cotton and tobacco crops.

But leaders of the tobacco industry, who pay $400,000,000 in taxes, found vague hostility toward them within the Government service.

Radical dissenters within the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, who are suspicious of the essence of the profit system on which our modern competitive economic society rests, have been delaying the making of helpful, price-raising marketing agreements with processors who buy the great agricultural staples.

It is elementary in government and in business management that the executive be permitted to surround himself with aides who are sympathetic to his major objectives.

It is inexcusable to continue within Government agencies hostile and conflicting elements who impede the swift movement toward a stated objective.

General business and employment are to a large extent dependent on the success of this experiment to rehabilitate the purchasing power of the farmers.

Mr. Peek has a single-minded devotion to the price-raising objective, and, with the sense of a practical executive, he is willing to let minor issues wait.

Responsibility for divided counsel will center on the President.

Mr. Roosevelt should realize that the opportunities for social regeneration and economic stability will be enormously heightened after business has been lifted from the bogs.

On the other hand, if business is handicapped with insupportable burdens at the early stages of recovery, economic deterioration is threatened, and that inevitably means social decay and a lowering of living standards.

Living in Glass Houses

The day is not far distant when people will live in glass houses, Dr. Alexander Silverman, the noted chemist, tells us in Boston.

The glass house would be clean and sanitary, easy to wash from the outside as well as within, he says, would require no papering or plastering and would be vermin proof. Color effects would be derived from controlled lighting (perhaps he means vari-hued bulbs), and from special colors of glass.

Conservatives will scorn the eminent professor. Also, the igloo dwellers would stand agape with wonder at the sight of modern apartment houses.

Waiting on the States

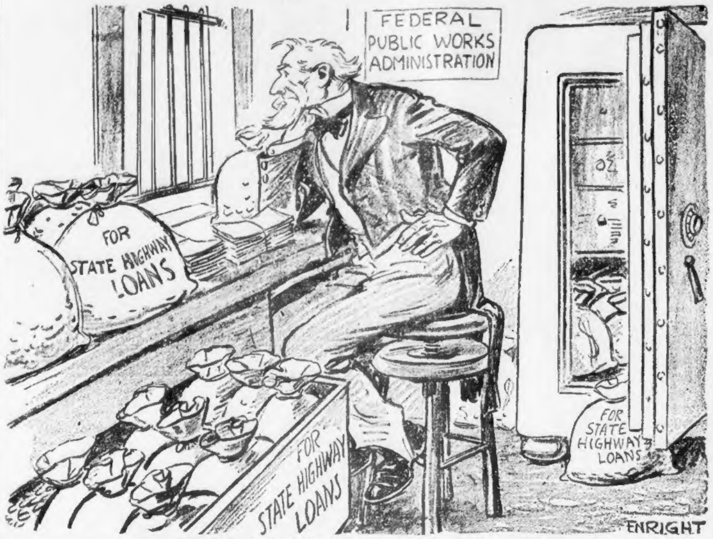
Copyright, 1933, by N. Y. American, Inc.



Secretary Ickes, as Federal Public Works Administrator, has appealed again to the Governors of ten States, asking them to expedite the awarding of road-building contracts and thereby make jobs for unemployed citizens.

The Public Works appropriations include large sums that have been set aside to lend to State for highway work. Some States are proceeding to put their allotments to work. Others are negligent—and it is this delay on the part of certain States that is holding back the Federal program.

But how long does the Federal Government need to wait on dilatory States?

As William Randolph Hearst has frequently pointed out, this country must have express highways extending from coast to coast. Such highways can be completed by linking up and widening existing good roads. In States able to do so portions of the work can be done by the States themselves with Federal aid. Other portions, where the States are poor or where population is thin, must be provided by the Federal Government itself.

To construct these transcontinental highways now, when costs are low, will make thousands of jobs, improve our internal communications for all time and—in event of war—contribute immeasurably to our national defense.

Sam Harris the Shy

NEW YORK, Nov. 15—Sam H. Harris is about the only Mauve Decade producer to have success producing these days. With the stage generally picking at the coverlets he has produced the largest quota of hits, the biggest being "Of Thee I Sing." He was down to the cushion when that became a smash.

O. O. McIntyre

Modest and scorning usual Rialto affectations, he is one of untheatrical temperament, fascinated by the theater. He began as a fight promoter on the East Side, finally piloting Kid McCoy. Later a partner of George M. Cohan, a mutually profitable combination founded on a brass rail hand-shake.

His Barrie-like shyness has the same flair for inspiring confidence that distinguished Charles Frohman. Irving Berlin, George S. Kaufman et al turn out tunes and lyrics for him when others get only a promise. In the same easy fashion, he acquires cream of the acting talent.

Out of the sidewalk ruff-scuff, his wits edged on Ghetto flagstones, he salts his enterprises with beauty and dignity of a surprising sort. Even his first night audiences, hand-picked, have a Cartier sparkle.

Berton Braley as a college boy in Montana with curly brown hair wore an ensemble completely brown, smoked a huge brown pipe and led a brown bull dog. Today he is known out yonder as "Brownie." Many minnesingers have expressed a flair for single color effects. Keats was partial to deep blue, Shelly, green, Amy Lowell liked yellow and Wilde, of course, was fond of purple.

• • •

The passing of few American writers so evoked the editorial pen as that of Ring Lardner. A friend of the humorist was able with the help of several clipping bureaus to round up 915 editorials that appeared after his demise. Doubtless a number escaped and the European output has not been compiled. What had inspired most of the panegyrics was Lardner's unfaltering devotion to literary purity. He never wrote a line or a word deviating the slightest from his high ideal. What a record!

The newest wrinkle in pocket lighters is a lipstick sized dingus that heats by the air pull through the cigar or cigarette end. It was given impetus when Adolphe Menjou flourished one in a jaunty man-about-town film. More than any other, Clifton Webb is besieged by marketers of such dress accessories. The exploiters figure that if he is spotted with one the article is made.

• • •

I walked the other dusk through Water st., once the roughest, toughest, loudest brawling street in Manhattan. Today wayfarers are scattery and the serene and white-fronted mission of Jerry McCauley seemed to blend perfectly into the placid picture. The block in the 300's where John Allen's famous bagnio once offered a hell-roaring bluster was equally quiet. "The" Allen was hailed by reformers of that day as "the wickedest man in New York." But in comparison to modern machine gun baby killers he was somewhat a saint.

• • •

On Water st., too, I saw a sawdusty fly-blown lunch room whose chalked window revealed this Quixotry: "White bean soup with ham hock, soupy hash and skillet gravy." Despite the smudgy look, it almost touched off a drool.

• • •

I wondered, walking on, if there are others for whom gravy has a magnet-like attraction. Not as a food but for splattering purposes. Any time they bring gravy near me I get anything from a lapel spot to a lap drench. So much so that when I see a gravy bearer in the offing I am afflicted with a sort of gravy palsy. Just a mention of it and I go into a rhumba. But I'm just dandy around soup.

By Elsie Robinson

Below the Belt

ANOTHER VICIOUS letter this morning. Anonymous, of course. They nearly always are. No, I wasn't surprised. They're the usual thing. I've actually had "form" ones! Sometimes a half dozen writing friends will receive duplicates in the same mail.

Elsie Robinson

What are they about? Any subject will do as long as the sender can achieve his or her one end, which is simply to hurt.

Do you endorse honestly? Sneeringly they inform you that "everybody knows you writers are all liers—simply writing whatever you're paid to write; not caring whether it's true or not."

Do you advocate purity? Leeringly they insinuate that you're "no better than you should be" yourself.

Do you criticize the Status Quo—demand a better deal for the Under Dog—suggest a general housecleaning for America? Promptly you're labeled "traitor—spy—filthy, sneaking thieving Red!"

Do you, out of pity for some other broken-hearted mother, share your own grief, as you'd share black bread and sour wine? Then you're "showing off—trying to get sympathy for yourself—pretending you had a child, which you probably never did, anyway."

So they come—sneering, leering, snarling snapping. Every popular columnist gets them by the thousands. O. O. McIntyre had something to say about them the other day.

Of all columnists, none is more respected or beloved than "Odd," and justly so. Quiet, friendly, always fair, he goes his way—telling of the beauty and charm, the quaintness and pathos of life as he sees it—making us more stupid and peevish souls his debtors. Yet the Snipers are out to get "Odd," too. For he says—

"In all my years of writing I have never answered those correspondents who hit below the belt. Time takes care of them."

It does, indeed! Time, and their own cussedness. For how does a Secret Sniper get that way? Is he really disturbed by your treatment of a subject? Does he sincerely desire to serve society by advancing more intelligent ideas and showing up your nonsense?

No, indeed! If such were his motives, you could respect them and him. Constructive criticism is a fine thing. An honest enemy is a gallant foe. But no such healthy impulse lies behind the wallops "below the belt" of the Secret Sniper.

The Secret Sniper, like other human beings, wants his place in the sun. And should have it. But he won't endure the long grilling required to get it. He wants God—and Society—to hand him his Good Luck on a silver platter—Right Now! And when that doesn't happen, he sees red.

His frustered egotism then proceeds to build a drama about his own defeat. If he can't be a Master Mind, he can at least be a Martyr. Other men may have their brief moment in the spot light. But God's picking on HIM. And that should certainly be Front Page News.

Forthwith, he proceeds to turn any and every chance remark into a personal insult. If his friends and family are indifferent to him, he's peeved. If they're exasperated, he's persecuted. As for columnists—he "hates 'em one and all, damn their eyes!"

For are they not occupying the space and monopolizing the glory which should be his, by rights? Why, if he had the break, he'd make 'em all look like two-spots!

This being impossible, he does the next best things. He snipes—sneers, slanders and belittles. And out of it all he gets an immense satisfaction. He'll "larn' 'em!" He'll show the world that he has power, too! He'll make people afraid of him—make people pay attention to him!

Why is a Secret Sniper? That's why.

Why is it best to ignore Snipers—"let time take care of them"—time and their own cussedness? That's also why.

And so, the next time someone hits YOU below the belt, remember "Odd"—and tell him we're all grateful.

Just Folks

Objectives

What am I working for? Drapes and things,
Curtains to hang at the window pane,
Seed for a gay little bird that sings,
Tulips when April shall come again;
Fire against winter winds and snow,
Rugs to lie on a varnished floor,
Books to stand on a shelf in a row
And food and raiment and shoes for four.

What am I working for? Money to buy
Some little comfort I know they'll need;
Something to leave to them after I die,
The home and her name written into the deed;
Four snug walls and a roof o'erhead,
All growing lovelier down the years—
Here, when everything's done and said
The totaled sum of my life appears.

Success or failure? Here it is told.
Was my gain worth while and my time well spent?
Don't reckon my merit in silver or gold,
But did those who loved me dwell here content.
Did this home often with laughter ring
Did friends find pleasure behind this door?
Did I make this place worth cherishing?
Well, that is the dream that I'm working for.

Georgia 'Horrible Example' Of Too Much Government

By James T. Williams, Jr.

When President Roosevelt goes to Warm Springs, Ga., to spend Thanksgiving day, he will find himself in a state that typifies the imperative need in this country for that simplification of state and local government which Mr. Roosevelt has so long advocated.

The State of Georgia today, with a population of 2,908,000, is divided into 159 counties. This means that the people of Georgia are taxed to support 159 county governments which are no longer needed. Meantime thousands of Georgians are losing their homes because they cannot pay taxes on their property. Other thousands of Georgians are destitute and unemployed and dependent upon the federal government for relief.

Georgia schools, like the schools of many other states, are suffering from a shortage of funds, school teachers are underpaid in many instances, and many Georgia children, at the very time, when the textile code has abolished child labor, must face the future with no schooling.

But the 159 county governments of Georgia are still doing business. Their officials and their operating expenses are eating up taxes that ought either to be abolished or expended on the upkeep of more and better schools and upon other state services that would benefit the whole state instead of being squandered upon obsolete county governments.

PLIGHT OF GEORGIA

The plight of Georgia is the plight of many other states today which have failed to simplify state and local government to meet the demands of a new day.

The necessity for doing this has long been a favorite theme with Mr. Roosevelt. Many times while he was governor of the State of New York he reminded the people of that state that they were being taxed to support more than 13,000 local units of government.

As governor he used to tell them about "the six or eight layers of government that they were taxed to keep up, federal, state, county and town, electric light district and fire department district, even sidewalk district" government.

But Mr. Roosevelt as governor did not content himself with condemning the outworn system government "built up in the days of the ox cart and unchanged in the days of the automobile" which the people of Georgia, New York and many other statees are taxed to support.

Coupled with his condemnation, Mr. Roosevelt, as governor and as President, has offered constructive criticism which his neighbors throughout the nation will do well to apply to their own state and local governments. The remedy, as Mr. Roosevelt sees it, is an awakened and organized public sentiment that will compel the people's elected servants to legislate ox-cart government out of existence and replace it with simplified government suited to modern needs.

FOLLOWED EXAMPLE

This is what North Carolina began to do under the progressive governorship of O. Max Gardner. Gov. Gardner first called in an expert outside agency to make a scientific survey of the state system of government. Then, in the light of the facts thus adduced, he went before the Legislature with a reorganization program supported by an argument that was irresistible.

Under his governorship North Carolina rid herself of many of the evils of county government by taking over two of the most important functions any state of the union is called upon to perform—the support and control of public education and the building and maintenance of public highways.

In addition, North Carolina, under Gov. Gardner's administration, wiped out the wicked system of county prisons and jails and chain gangs. The state took over the administration of all penal institutions.

Virginia followed the example of North Carolina, while Harry Flood Byrd was governor. At his invitation Gov. Gardner addressed the Virginia Legislature at Richmond.

An outside agency made a survey of the state. Virginia now has taken over the supervision of her educational systems, and is paving the way for county consolidation, and her highway system has been placed under state governance.

What North Carolina and Virginia have begun to do, Georgia and other states can do, and must do before their citizens can get better government at reasonable cost.

Thousands of Dollars to Change Hands for Tiny Squares of Colored Portraits

By Edwin C. Hill

Two men in New York City are winding up a task which has taken them through a collection of albums much like the albums in which we paste up the pictures of the family and friends made at the seashore during the summer vacation. These books are picture ones, too, but not of Uncle John and Cousin Neilie. The portraits in them are of kings, queens and emperors, of ships, animals and a thousand and one other things.

Among them is a small piece of paper, reddish-violet in color and about an inch square in size. It bears the legend, "British Guiana, One Penny." It is a postage stamp issued in 1856 by that colony of the crown. It is the philatelic prize of the world, the Kohinoor of postage stamps.

For that scrap of paper the late Arthur Hind paid out $34,198—American dollars of gold standard value—back in 1922, outbidding the King of England and all others, when it was put up for sale in Paris at the disposal of the collection of the Austrian Count Ferrari, who was perhaps the most avid of all the world's stamp-hunters.

The count's eminence passed on to Mr. Hind, whose death in Miami last March threw on the market a great collection valued at anything between $500,000 and $2,000,000. His will ordered the collection to the auction block, and the two appraisers he named have announced that, after the completion of their work, the auction will follow in 1934.

That auction will be big news. Men and women will travel from all parts of the globe to attend it and to bid for the prizes of the philatelic world. And those of us who are not familiar with the hobby are going to be staggered by some of the prices that will be paid, and eagerly paid, even in these thin times.

Arthur Hind, born in England, came to America about 35 years ago to engage in the prosaic occupation of manufacturing plush. He settled in Utica, N. Y., and soon had a prominent standing in the business and banking circles of that community. A friend got him interested in stamps and he went to it in a big way.

When the Duveen collection was put up for sale, Hind carried it off by paying $170,000. Again, it was his $50,000 which put in his steel safes two white envelopes which bore two cancelled stamps, the one and two-penny denominations of the Mauritius postoffice issue. He paid $12,000 for a provisional stamp issued by a postmaster of Boscawen, N. H. Hind did most of his buying at auction, believing that the competitive bidding fixed values more truly than private sales.

Shortly before his death Hind met King George of England at a stamp exhibition in London. The king jokingly remarked: "Too bad you were outbidding me the other day." Hind protested that he did not know that his opponent at the auction was representing the king, and offered to present the stamp to the monarch's collection.

"No, no, said George V. "I'll tell you what I'll do. I have a stamp you'd like to own. Let's swap."

Which they did.

For many people stamp collecting seems to hold the same fascination that art, books, antiques, and gems have for other connisseurs. And sometimes there is a rare stroke of fortune, such as occurred in the sale of the 24-cent airmails issued by this government A purchaser of a sheet of one hundred stamps turned them back to the clerk, saying that they were valuless because of a glaring misprint. A collector next in line almost collapsed in his anxiety to get hold of that sheet of inverted stamps. He snapped them up, and all the power of the United States government couldn't take them from him.

Each one of those one hundred stamps is valued at $2750, or $275,000 for all. Col. Green of Dartmouth Mass son of the late Hetty Green, is supposed to have paid $15,000 for a block of four.

The most distinguished of all stamp collectors is the President of these more or less United States. As a small boy, Franklin D. Roosevelt was bitten by the stamp bug. He set out to gather the greatest—the most varied—collection in America. His collection embraces some 10,000 stamps representing the gleanings of more than 40 years. It's value is great, but it is not for sale and has never been publicly exhibited.

On March 4, when Mr. Roosevelt entered the White House, his collection formed one of the most carefully guarded sections of the luggage that went from Hyde Park and the town house in Manhattan, and a good chunk of storage space is required in the White House to accommodate the numerous bulky books and envelopes that embrace the collection.

Since the government, and especially its state department, is constantly receiving cancelled stamps on correspondence from every corner of the world, fresh issues of interest almost daily find their way to the President's desk. A man of many eager interests, stamps have a special power to please and relax the man who rules us.
